your horses, my gentle friends.

Every man likes to own a good cow, but people do not always agree in what really constitutes a good cow. Some cows will give a great flow of milk a little while during the year, and then fall off greatly, while others will be more uniform in their yield of milk, and hold that uniformity the greater part of the year. It is evident that the latter is the most profitable, and therefore the better cow. A writer in an exchange paper gives the following definite rules or figures as constituting a good cow:

"A cow that will average 5 quarts of milk a day through the year, making 1,825 quarts, is an extraordinary good cow. One that will yield five quarts a day for ten months is a good cow, and one that will average four quarts during that time is more than an average quality. That would make 1,200 grts.
