For the Farmer.

THE FARMER'S OCCUPATION.

ONE ADVANTAGE OF IT SELDOM CONSIDERED.

Of the several advantages which belong to the occupation of the tiller of the soil, there is one which, though far from being the least, seems to be very seldom taken into the account, as we find little mention made of it, or reference to it in conversations or writings upon this subject. This seemingly but little thought of advantage, consists in the fact that the employment of those who cultivate the soil, as a general rule, exempts those who follow it from the two opposite extremes of poverty and riches, which are about equally pernicious in their tendencies, temptations and influences. Although men generally shut their eyes upon the evils of prosperity, and do not willingly, directly, or in practice, acknowledge them, yet there is a tacit confession often made of the existence of certain dangers or evils in the possession of great riches, as in the commonly received opinion that there are more good men and women, more worth of character, more persons living usefully and respectably, more domestic happiness, more peace and contentment, and less folly and vice in the middle ranks of soci-· ety, than among either the very rich or the very poor. In this form, if in no other, we can obtain some acknowledgment of the evils, or at least dangers of prosperity, that is, of riches isolated from a life of industry.

Now as all farmers, at least in the greater part of these United States, occupy, or may live through half the summer. occupy this middle ground at a safe remove from the extremes of poverty and riches, destitution or over-abundance, and as their business almost of necessity involves their occupying it, this may be accounted one of the characteristic advantages of their profession. And even when they rise to the possession of considerable wealth, as some few of them occasionally do, they remain almost entirely free from the evils and perils of such a position, chiefly in virtus of two peculiarities of their occupation. One of these is, that so long as they remain farmers, the care and oversight of their lands require that they should be actively and industrially employed; and the other is, that when they arrive at the gradual way, which exempts them from the worst circumstances ever connected with prosexpectedly, that they produce usually the gant, reckless, dissipated, "possessed of a devil," and, in a word, so insane and insufferable as to be justly considered a curse to the community in which he resides.

These considerations seem not undeserving the attention of parents and others, whose estimates of a farmer's business may influence their own happiness, or the choice which is to be made by others.

LUCK IN FARMING.

There are few words oftener upon the lips of a certain class of farmers than luck. Smith is a "lucky dog," because his corn never rots, his wheat never winter-kills, his sheep never gets into his rye, and his cows never invade his meadows and orchards. His crops are better than his neighbor's his butter brings more in the market, and even his wife and children have a more contented look than of brush, and the fruit to remain of an infeother people. Everything he touches thrives. | rior quality. What a lucky man Smith is?

Now, the fact is, luck has nothing to do with Smith's success in life. If you watch the man, you will find that every result he reaches is anticipated and planned for, and comes of his own wit and work. It is the legitimate reward of his labors, and it would have been bad luck, if it had turned out otherwise. His corn always comes up, because he always selects the seed himself, and hangs it up by the husks in the garret where it is thoroughly dried. He does not plant until the sun has warmed the soil enough to give the germ an immediate start. He drains his wheat fields with tile, and the water that used to freeze and thaw upon the surface, and throw the roots of wheat out, and kill them, now passes down into the drains, and runs off. His fields are green and beautiful in spring, when his neighbors are russet, brown and desolate. His fences are in good repair, animals are not made breachy by the continual temptation of dilapidated walls .-His wife and children are comfortably clothed and fed, and are not kept in a continual fret and worry by a husband and father, who has no system or energy in his business .-"A time and place for everything," is his motto carefully carried out. The shoemaker is always called in when his services are feet, catch cold, have the lung fever, and run also of the domestic fowls. IMPORTANCE GF GOOD TRANSPLAN-

A correspondent of the Genesee Farmer states that he procured twenty dry and shriveled peach trees last spring, of a nurseryman who had dug them up early in the spring and heeled them in, and being 'culls,' had remained unsold. They were set out about the time that peach trees in the nursery row were coming out in full leaf. They were treated in the following manner:-The bruised roots were pruned off, the tops closely shortened in, so that they might correspond with the reduced roots. They were carefully set in holes made about two feet across and eight inches deep. The earth was well filled in canong the interstics, settling it with water poured in. They were then freely mulched with strawy manure.-Every one lived and made "an extraordinary growth," while one in the same rows treated in the common manner, (which we suppose means unshortened and unmulched,) did not

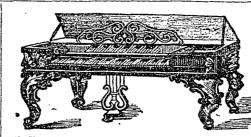

The peach tree, more than any other, says the Country Gentleman, in which we agree, needs very free shortening back in setting out. We have succeeded better with trees three or four years from the bud, or twice the ordinary size, than with one year trees without this treatment. There is no other tree, that is more sensibly affected with good after culture-for example, after being set well, give it mellow cultivation the same season throughout, (or mulch it heavily with coarse manure,) and it will send out shoots about three feet long. Give it no cultivation or mulching, nor shortening back, and let the earth become hard and grown up with weeds, and the shoots will not be more than three inches possession of riches, they do so usually in a long. This experiment is worth trying by any one who doubts it, on alternate trees in a row, or on alternate rows. We are willing perity, namely, its suddenness. For it is to let any one who prefers or practices the when riches come to a man suddenly or un- old system of neglect, select from any nursery the finest peach trees that ever grew, and most pernicious results, making him not un- give them his favorits treatment for two frequently "a fool of fortune," or proud; con- years; and we will take the poorest 'culls' temptuous, haughty, overbearing, extrava- that were ever discarded as worthless, if they only have life in them; and we will agree to beat him two-fold by means of the best management already mentioned. IMPROVING OLD ORCHARDS.

Desirable as pears, cherries and plums are, we can hardly count on very large and constant supplies of such fruit. Our climate, or soil, is so unfavorable to their growth, or they are infested with so many insects and diseases, and require so much care, that few farmers can devote sufficient attention to their culture. The apple must be our main dependence; and it is no mean dependence either. Yet, strange to say, many orchargs are treated with neglect. The trunks and lattion unsurpassed for selling the best instruments in the limbs of trees are suffered to become mossy, the tops are allowed to grow up a dense mass

Now, there are few men who can really afford to keep such orchards. Why not break up the ground, and if it is not thought best to let it lie fallow, then give it a coat of manure and raise some kind of hoed crop upon it. If possible, mulch the roots of the coat of the coa tree with old straw or chips. Once a year, at least, scrub the trunks with wet lye, or potash water, to remove the moss and rout the insects which harbor there. Then, as to pruning, there is enough to do, but it must be done in the right way. It will not answer to mount the trees with rough-nailed boots, and, axe in hand, hack away like a woodsman felling a forest. Tread on the limbs corefully so as not to start the hark. Use a corefully so as not to start the hark. Use a corefully so as not to start the hark. Use a corefully so as not to start the hark. carefully, so as not to start the bark. Use a fine-toothed pruning saw; thin out the branches so as to leave an open symmetrical head, and where large branches must be taken off, cover the wounds with grafting-wax, or a solution of gum-shellee. If the fruit is of inferior quality, graft in choicer sorts, beginning at the top and grafting only one-third of the tree each year. It costs no more to raise good kinds of fruit than poor; the satisfaction and the income are ten-fold greater. _American Agriculturist.

The general character of the Scientific American is well known, and, as heretofore, it will be chiefly devoted to the promulgation of information relating to the various Mechanical and Chemical Arts, Manufactures, Agriculture, Patents, Inventions, Engineering, Mill Work, and all interests which the light of Practical Science is calculated to advance. It is issued weekly, in form for binding; it contains annually from 500 to 600 finely executed Engravings, and Notices of American and European Improvements, together with an Official List of American Patent Claims published weekly in advance of all other papers.

It is the aim of the Editors of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN to present all subjects discussed in its columns in a practical and popular form. They will also endeavor to maintain a candid fearlessness in combating and exposing false theories and practices in Scientific and Mechanical matters, and thus preserve the character of the SCIENTIFIC new type.
