THE POTATO CULTURE.

The following we find in the Country Gentleman, from Mr. G. M'Mahon, of Milford,

"My plan has been for the last eight years, to change my seed as often as once in every two years, even if I plant the same sort.-I have for the last six years taken the trouble to send from 75 to 150 miles for my seed, and think that I have been paid for it in a tenfold proportion. The sorts that I have been most successful with are the Prince Albert or white Napoleon, the Irish lumpers and the Peach Blows. These three kinds never have showed any simptoms of the blight in this section of the country, while many of my neighbors have kept their old sorts, and have lost all or nearly all, the two past seasons. I planted in May last, 240 rods of ground with hundred and seventy-five bushels in October last as nice potatoes as ever any man need look at. They are admired by all; they are very white and smooth; many of them measured from eight to ten and a half inches in length: the tops all remained in a perfect state of health until they were cut off by the frost. The tops of the Peach-blows do the

"My plan of cultivation is to take stalk ground or else plow it in the fall. I generally select the smallest ones that I raise for my own use to plant-cut each potatoe, be it ever so small. I seldom ever use over four and a half or five bushels of seed to the acre.

"Method of Cultivation. I generally use about 20 loads of coarse straw manure to the acre-spread and plow in-then plant my seed three by three and a half feet apart; when the plants begin to shew themselves use a top dressing of hen manure, plaster of Paris, and leached ashes, mixed together, a full hand to the hill, which I have found to be a great benefit to me."

In the Ohio Cultivator, Mr. Robert Seavers; of Oskaloosa, Iowa, begs to be heard .-

"Permit me to add my experience in the cultivation of potatoes, as additional evidence in favor of the fact, that we are only just now, in the nineteenth century, beginning to learn how to cultivate potatoes. It seems a little strange, too, that the discovery of certain facts in relation to this matter, appears to have been simultaneous in different and dis-

"Last spring I took one peck of Pea potatoes, and cut them in very small pieces, contaning, some two, but most of them only one eye in each hill. I planted them in hills about 3½ feet apart each way, putting only one piece in each hill, and from that peck I dug and measured 25 bushels of good potatoes, after throwing away some 4 or 5 bushels that were affected with rot. The ground occupied was a little over 8 square rods, and was cultivated tolerably well.

"Your correspondent, W. C. Johnson,

"I am of the opinion that it is a loss to plant 2 or 3 whole potatoes in a hill." I add, there is not only a loss to potatoes planted, but an actual damage is done to the coming crop, for I am convinced that more and larger potatoes can be raised by planting one eye in each hill, than can be raised by putting 2 or 3 whole potatoes in a 'hill. The more seed you put in a hill, the more small potatoes you will have in proportion to the number raised."

THE OATS CROP.

[From the Germantown Telegraph.] Mr. Editor: - As spring is near at hand, farmers are beginning to think of plowing and putting in their crops for a future harvest; and among the first to be attended to is that of sowing the oats. Before sowing the seed, it is necessary to have the ground well prepared, as by thus laying the foundation for the future crop as much may be done, as in building a house, to lay a good foundation upon which the future edifice may be successfully reared; and as in the case of the house the foundation and the material used make the structure what it is, so in all crops the due preparation of the soil and the selection of good seed are the only hopes of a fruitful harvest. But farmers are in too much of a hurry to commence plowing, and do not wait until the rains have soaked away and the ground in a condition fit to be worked .-Do not be in a hurry to plow, but wait until the ground is ready, and see that you are ready when it is, and you will seldom fail of getting the crop in good time.

I have frequently observed farmers to plow in narrow lands only seven or eight paces wide, instead of fifteen. This I conceive to be a great mistake, because where the ridge is turned, the soil is doubled, as it were, and where the furrow is, the soil is turned off; thererefore in the furrows but little grows, while on the ridges it grows too rank and is usually knocked down while in the green state, and the grain not generally fully formed, besides giving much more trouble in gathering. After the ground is well plowed, it should be harrowed over once, and the oats sown, after harrowing twice more, should be rolled. The seed sown should be carefully selected, preferring that which has had no rain on it, and which is well filled, and as heavy as is possible to obtain it.

The seed should be frequently changed, as it deteriorates from being sown on the same land year after year. There can be no exact time set as to the changing of seed, yet I have always considered much was gained by changing every six or eight years. Within the last few years some farmers have used the oats drill and have found it to answer very well; yet I think the advantage to be gained over the old plan of sowing broadcast are not worth the cost of the machine. The amount of grain sown per acre seems to vary much with different persons, some sowing one and a half bushels, and others as much as four bushels per acre; yet no advantage can arise from thes extremes any more than in the extremes of other things. Extremes should always be avoided, and if a mean is taken the truth will be approximated. Two and a half or three bushels are plenty, and either more or less than this will not answer

Some think this is the poorest crop of the farmer, but this is not the case when properly attended to, as it should and generally does turn out sixty-five to seventy-five bushwhite Napoleons, and gathered over three els per acre; and as it occupies but little time in sewing or in gathering, I think it is as valuable as many other crops. Having finished the plan of raising the oats, I will append a few lines respecting its history, &c.

Oats is known to the botanic world by the name of avena sativa, and was known to and cultivated by the ancients; but its original locality is not certainly known. Anson, in his voyage around the world, found it in the island of Juan Fernandez, on the coast of Chili; it also grows wild in the island of Sicily, and is now cultivated in all civilized countries. It is much used for food in the form of oatmeal, in Scotland and a few other countries, but seldom used here except for for horses or cattle.

Yours Truly,

THE POTATOE DISEASE.—The potatoe dis ease has made great progress in England and Ireland, the past season. So convinced of the injurious effects of the potatoe are some of the physicians, that they have denied their use to children, as liable to create eruptions, and to injure the stomach.

Procrastination in cooking is the thief of all goodness in the potatoe.

THE NEW YORK STEAM SAW-MILL AND MACHINE COMPANY, CAPITAL, TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

The Combination Saw-Mill was patented October, 1856,

A number of them are in successful operation in different sections of the country, Canada, Cuba, and South America, and wherever their merits have been tested they are being adopted by lumber manufactu-been tested they are being adopted by lumber manufacturers in preference to all other mills.

The following letter expresses the general opinion of those who are using the Combination Mill:

MESSES. EXERSON & Co.—Gentlemen: I have tried the saw-mill purchased of you, and will say that it performs well, and more than meets my expectations. I am well pleased with its performance. I set it up on a small stream that afforded constant water about as thick as my little from which was much more than enforced to support the finger, which was much more than sufficient to supply the boiler. We are able to cut 3,000 feet of beautiful lumber in 12 hours, with something less than one cord of wood.— It is the very thing we have so much needed in our county for a long time. With a little trouble and expense, we are able to move it from five to ten miles per day, and set it up in the heart of the timber, which saves the great burden of hauling the logs a long distance to the mill. JESSE KERR, Jr.,

Yours respectfully, Louisville, Tenn The company has purchased Land's Patent Feed Arrangement, which is illustrated and described in the Scientific Interven for October 24. This adds greatly to the THE COMBINATION MILL,
