

For the Farmer.

Differences in Soils. [From the Country Gentleman.] Soil is the earth wherein crops of every kind are produced. The component parts are argil, sand, water, and air.

A beautiful head of rich bleached hair, completely preserved to the original color. And who that is gray would not have his hair restored to its original color?

Gravelly soils freely imbibe moisture, and part with it with great facility. From the lightness of their texture, they are neither expensive nor difficult in the means of cultivation.

As to the use to which soils may be most advantageously applied, it is requisite that clay soil be kept rich and full of manure, which qualifies it for carrying crops of wheat, oats, beans, and clover.

The Hog. The hog is now universally recognized as one of the most valuable animals on our farms. Managed judiciously, he will be found to defray the cost of fattening, and not unfrequently leave a handsome balance in the hands of his keeper.

In a few words. It is this:—In the immediate neighborhood of your hog-pen, have a yard strongly and permanently enclosed, and of sufficient extent to accommodate comfortably the number of swine you intend to keep.
