Farmer and Gardener.

Lime, and-so-forth.

[From the Germantown Telegraph.] Time. When lime is prepared for agricultural purposes, it should be used immediately. If long exposed to rain and dews before being spread, it loses a great portion of its fertilising power, which consists in its decomposing vegetable matter, and neutralising acids which abound in some soils, especially those subject to flooding or stagnant water.

Application. The preferable way of applying lime, according to my experience, is on wheat stubble; as the lime gives the grass power to absorb ammonia from the atmosphere, and retains that, which is disengaged by the decomposition of vegetable matter in the soil. From thirty to sixty bushels per acre, once in six years should be applied .-Thirty bushels is about equal to one ton.

Good effects have resulted from its application on wheat and corn. When thus applied, it may be spread before plowing, but better afterwards, and thoroughly harrowed in. It should never be combined with manure, unless the whole is immediately plowed

Indications of want of lime in the soil. may be seen in heavy crops of straw, and they seem to run to fingers and seed.

Soils. Lime is applicable to every clay soil, every peaty soil, sandy or thin soil.-When applied to the latter, manure should accompany it. Lime will renew many exhausted soils, if properly applied.

The nice adaption of manures to the pccueconomy too universally neglected. There should be more system and research by practical farmers. To double the crops on most farms, about all that is necessary is for our agriculturists to sell off one-half their land. and with the proceeds buy manure for the other-half. The larger the farm, the less a man grows to the acre. Farmers should always plow deep; the roots will strike deeper into the soil, and thus obtain more nourishment, and will stand the drought much better; the ground can afterwards be tilled much deeper, thus enabling the moisture from dews and fogs to penetrate to the roots of plants, in time of drought.

Sheltering manure. Stable mannre kept under shelter, and properly mixed with absorbing substances, muck, leaves, strawy litter, &c., is of much greater value than when exposed in the open yard. An analysis made at the English Agricultural College. shows that it contains more than double the quantity of nitrogenised matter, and the same of salts, containing organic and inorganic matter, soluble in water; while of potash and soda, the unsheltered manure retains only .08 per cent., and the sheltered 2 per cent. It would pay farmers well to build ma-

Mules and Hinnies.

If we should ask the youngest farmer on our list of subscribers, "What is a mule?" he would reply at once that, he is "a hybrid or cross, between the horse and the ass."-And he would begin to look at our ears, as if the asking so simple a question indicated that we were akin to the last named animal. Yet it is not certain that everybody could answer our question; and fewer still could tell us that there are two distinct animals, both the progeny of the horse and ass, one of which is, and the other is not, a mule. The offspring of a male ass and female horse is the genuine mule. The offspring of a male horse (stallion) and a female ass is a hinny. The English word hinny is derived from the Latin verb hinnio, to neigh, which was used by the Romans to designate a point of difference between the two animals—the hinny neighs while the mule brays. Nor is this the only difference. The general appearance of the mule is like that of the ass, while the hinny more resembles the horse; and the temper of the two is likewise different.

The mule has long ears, like its sire, though a little shortened, out of respect to its dam. The mule has also a rope-like tail, with a tuft at the end; and a long head, (though not a very profound thinker;) a thin thigh, erect frame, slender legs and hoofs, and the unmelodious voice of the sire.

The hinny has a smaller and better shaped head, flowing mane and tail, shorter hair, and larger.frame, legs and feet, than the mule.-The hinny has also the voice of the horse.

Considering the wonderful endurance of the mule, its comparative freedom from disease, and faculty of keeping in good condition on the cheapest food, we wonder that this animal is not more commonly used at the North, for all kinds of farm and team work. At the South, the mule is the common drudge. The hinny is bardier than the horse, more patient, and will bear harder usage, yet is inferior in these respects to the ass and mule.—American Agriculturist.

The Foot of a Horse.

The human hand is often taken to illustrate Divine wisdom—and very well. But have you ever examined your horse's foot ?-It is hardly less curious, in its way. Its parts are somewhat complicated, yet their design is simple and obvious. The hoof is not, as it appears to the careless eye, a mere solid lump of insensible bone, fastened to the leg by a joint. It is made up of a series of thin layers, or leaves of horn, about five hundred in number, nicely fitted to each other and forming a lining to the foot itself. Then there are as many more layers belonging to what is called the "coffin-bone," and fitted into this. These are elastic. Take a quire of paper, and insert the leaves, one by one, into those of another quire, and you will get some idea of the arrangement of these several layers. Now, the weight of the horse rests on as many clastic springs as there are layers in his four feet-about four thousand and all this is contrived, not only for easy conveyance of the horse's own body, but of human bodies, and whatever burdens may be laid upon him.

Preservation of Meat.

A Belfast (Iroland) paper, states that meat, first dried in a current of air, and then hung up in a close chamber and exposed for twenlight crops of grain; and in root crops, where | ty or thirty minutes to the fumes of burning sulphur, will keep as long as required. The meat before packing, must be further dried and then covered with some impervious substance. Sheep killed in Algiers during the hot months of August, and passed through this process, were taken to Paris, and sold a month later. We have seen hams which, liar wants of every crop, is a point in farm after pickling, were smoked a short time over burning sulphur, that tasted and kept well.

I was disposed to place your Restorative in the same category with the thousand and one loudly trumpeted quack remedies, until I met you in Lawrence county some months since, when you gave me such assurance as induced the trial of your Restorative in the further tire to my group wife, where hair had become such assurance as induced the trial of your Restorative in my family—first by my good wife, whose hair had become very thin and entirely white, and before exhausting one of your large bottles, her hair was restored nearly to its original brown color, and had thickened and become beautiful and glossy upon, and entirely over the head; she continues to use it, not simply because of its beautifying effects upon the hair, but because of its healthful influence upon the head and mind. Others of my family and friends are using your Restorative, with the happiest effects; therefore, my scepticism and doubts in reference to its character and value are entirely removed; and I can and do most cordially and confidently recommend its use by all who would have their hair restored from white or gray (by reason of sickness or age,) to original color and beauty. all who would have their hair restored from white or gray (by reason of sickness or age,) to original color and beauty, and by all young persons who would have their hair beautiful and glossy.

THE LIVER INVIGORATOR! REPARED BY DR. SANFORD.—Compounded entirely from GUMS is one of the best purgative and Liver medicines now before the public, that acts as a Catharlia, easier, milder, and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Catharlia but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter, then on the bowels and stomach to carry off that matter; thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it: and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.
