THE GLOBE.

Huntingdon, Wednesday, Oct. 27, 1858 Rise and Fall of the Victoria Gold Fever. A correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin gives the following humorous account of Miller.

the gold fever in the Fraser river region: "Our usually quiet town has been in a state of great excitement for several days past, and has risen from below zero to the boiling point. A few days ago, news came in that a great many whites had been killed by the Indians on Fraser river, above the canon, which, however, has since been con-tradicted, and proved to be untrue. Immediately after this, reports were put in circulation that very rich gold deposits were discovered in the neighborhood of Victoria. At first, only a chosen few seemed to know anything of it, and I was one of the small number selected to go on a prospecting tour, but before I could get ready, the party started off, and left me to my own reflections. Next morning, a long-legged individual, who formed one of the expedition, went around town and bought up all the buckets, pans, shovels, and other mining implements, got bills of them, and promised to call and pay for them soon. Then the news began to spread that such a one had seen such a one, who had seen Tom, Dick or Harry with 'the dust' in large quantities; and a few generous individuals were on hand, and exhibited samples of the same. With the knowledge I possessed of the men who composed the party, I gave the subject but little attention; but, about noon, the excitement became intense, and everbody was running around circulating the most absurd stories, and many preparing to go and stake off their claims.

"A friend of mine rushed into my room, and wondered at my stupidity for being in the house while others were on the road that 'leads to fortune.' I put on my hat, walked out among the excited crowd, and the first man who caught my attention, was a celebrated auctioneer, rushing down street, with an armful of gold-dust bags. I asked him what he thought of the new mines. He didn't know-thought it might be true-had sold all his shovels at a good price-and was going to speculate in money-bags. The next person I met, was a speculator, who looked at me with a peculiar twinkle of the eye, as much as to say, 'I am in for it now my boy?' Further down, I saw John Butts ringing a bell for the schooner Ino, to start for the new mines at 3 o'clock. I went down to the Ino, and saw only one hungry individual on deck, opening oysters with a pen-knife. I turned to come back-met a California Judge-Butts asked the Judge if he wanted a passage-Judge declined-said he was too old to go mining. On regaining the street, I met a lawyer, and several tape and corduroy gentlemen on mules, off for the mines, and it would puzzle a philosopher to decide which were wiser animals-the bipeds or quadrupeds.

"By this time, horses, mules, wagons, drays, wheelbarrows and all kinds of movable machinery were in motion, and a long string of humanity stretched out from the town with blankets, picks, shovels, provisions, etc., each one inquiring the way to the new Dorado, and most of them going every way but the right one. It was surprising to see how every Munchausen tale was credited. Every one had the fever. I got it, indeed, myself--pulled on my big boots--offered any price for a mule, but couldn't get one--tried to get a horse-none to be had. I then offered to walk the twelve miles with provisions and blankets on my back, if my friends would accompany me-friends all declinedsaid it was too far, but wished me to go and | uel II. Price, Amos S. Green, S. Keneagy. stake off claims for the crowd. I met Longlegs, and asked him how much gold he had found and what he thought of the mines .--He said they were 'all right'---he had found some gold there, and had bought up all the mining tools on speculation. The crowd grumbled, and said that was poor satisfaction--'some' was not enough. I met a China-man, who asked me if I would go mining. I said, yes; and he then informed me if I would go out and get a claim, he would come to-morrow and take me as a partner. I was debating whether I would break his head with a rock, or cut off his pig-tail, when the presence of the Sheriff reminded me that those stupid fellows in the Fort would not permit me to indulge in such delicate pastime. I returned to my room, disgusted-took a cup of tea-got up all right, and bound to watch the fun.

"After supper I walked out of town, and met a company of musical Indians going to their wigwams; turned out and went with them. A great crowd of 'Bostons' followed, showing their usual appreciation of foreign artists. We had great singing, dancing, shouting and plenty of stick music. All seemed happy. The Bostons were glorious, and gave the musicians three cheers and a tiger. I returned home, weary, restless and disappointed; took a gin toddy; went to bed, and dreamed about boulders, nuggets and wealth in profusion. Thus ended my first day's experience of the latest humbug.
"Next day, towards evening, I walked out about a mile out of town, to get a view of the 'return wave' that was expected. I met a Chinaman, leading the van of the forlorn hope—a poor, hungry, dispirited, motley crew. I asked 'John' what luck? He said 'No luck; two pans, one color---no pay."--And this was the experience of the victims who, in addition to their sufferings, had to endure the jibes and jeers of the crowd who watched their return.
