Original. DANCING.

[For the Huntingdon Globe.]

Although much has been written upon the subject of dancing, it is but seldom we see anything in its favor: indeed, all writers go forth in the dances of them that make merupon this subject seem to hold but one opin- ry." And again in the thirteenth verse :--ion respecting it, viz: that it is immoral, and that its tendencies are only evil. It is worthy of notice, however, that persons who turn their mourning into joy, and will comhave written upon this subject, have been almost invariably of one class, viz: ministers; and, though, I would not be disrespectful surely must be sufficient to set this question towards them, I but give expression to my firm conviction, when I say that from the nature of their occupation and surroundings, they are, of all other men, least capable of | to the faith of Messiah, Bon David, whom forming a correct opinion respecting it; for | they will then acknowledge as he who was the reason, that from time immemorial, it the babe of Bothlehem, but now "the wonhas been customary with them to denounce | derful, the counselor, the great and mighty this particular amusement, and in youth, from the influence of their teachers, they become early imbued with sentiments of hatred and opposition to it; and in after life, being restrained by the habits and dignity of their profession from mingling in the dance, are prevented from experimentally acquainting themselves with its nature and influence, and are, therefore, incapacitated to form a proper judgment respecting it. Their opinion, then, upon this subject, is entitled to no more consideration than the opinion of a person respecting the nature or merits of any other subject with which he had little or no acquaintance: nor, will it do for them to say, that, although practically unacquainted with it, they can yet, from their observation of its effects, form a correct opinion respecting the cause. That would do very well if they would take its legitimate effects, and from them, argue the character and tendencies of the cause; but, their being already prejudiced against it, renders it highly improba- place themselves within its reach, banishing ble that they would pursue such a course; torpidity and sloth, and awakening every upon the same principle all that we are in the habit of considering lawful and right, may from its abuse, be proven unlawful and

In my earlier years and from the teachings of loved relatives, I had formed a strong aversion to this amusement, and really believed it to be the embodiment of all the bad things that were said of it. But this was but an instance of mind placing too implicit credence on testimony, without examining the facts. In later years however, experience views, or rather those opinions which in childbelieve it to be entirely proper and useful.

But here it must be distinctly understood that I have reference to those dances only which are used in strictly respectable circles. Although my experience in dancing is not very great, yet it is not altogether inconsid-

Jeremiah, 31st, 4th and 13th, where God, in reference to the re-instatement of Israel in their own land in the latter days, says :---"Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built O Virgin, daughter of Israel, thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrots, and shall "Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together, for I will fort them and make them rejoice from their sorrow." To all unprejudiced minds, this forever at rest. The time to which these passages refer is, after the restoration of the Jews to their own land, and their conversion Lord," and by this very acknowledgment and return to the faith of their fathers, be restored to more than their ancient privileges as God's own peculiar people, and it is in this condition and under these circumstances, that God has promised that the virgin, the young man and the old, shall rejoice in the dance together. Surely, if it was immoral, God would not allow them to pollute themselves with it. And if we look to nature for her voice upon this subject, her answer may be found in the straight limbs and stalwart forms of those who practice it. And what is better adapted to enliven the mind dispirited by reverses, no matter of what kind, or to dispel the gloomy shades of melancholly generated by harassing cares, and which frequently bring the mind complacently to plan a suicidal death, than the dance? And one can hardly tell whether the body or the mind is benefitted by it quickest or most. It certainly exerts a powerfully vivifying influence upon all who function of the soul to life and energy. It is particularly adapted to the young, and no more healthful an exercise could be desired, nor one which will give more brightness to the eye, or pleasure to the heart, strength to the enervated system, or will sooner rejuvenate premature old age. Behold that little child, how she jumps and skips, and claps her tiny hands, as she alternately laughs and sings, while from the cellar to the attic, she romps in wild and childish glee, ever and anon giving expression to the cause of that and observation, have led me to change my joy which has so clated her little heart, in the announcement, "Papa's come home!" "Pahood I was instructed to entertain, and I now pa's come home !" And do we not see this not only look with favor upon dancing, but same thing acted out every day of our lives, by "children of a larger growth," whenever circumstances occur, which gives joy or gladness to their hearts. And what is it? but the actions which flow from natural impulses which the Creator has implanted in the heart for like purposes. And where, let me ask, is

"Witchcraft" and Agriculture. Pliny has recorded the story of an industrious and ingenious husbandman, who, being in advance of the knowledge of his time, cultivated a small piece of ground upon an improved method, by which he gathered much more fruits, and reaped larger profits than the neighbors about him, though their possessions were more ample. His uncommon success excited their envy, insomuch that they brought this accusation against him :---"That by screery, charms and witchcraft, he had transported his neighbors' fruits, fertility, and increase to his own fields." For this he was ordered peremptorily by Albinus, a Roman general skilled in agriculture, to answer the charge before him. Cresinus, fearing the issue, resolved upon his best defence. brought his plow and other rural implements, ITHE LIVER INVIGORATOR !---and displaying them openly, he set there also his daughter, a lusty, strong lass, big of bone : then, turning to the citizens-"My masters," up then, turning to the citizens. My masters, quoth he, "these are the sorceries, charms, and all the enchantments that I use. HIGKORY GROVE. St. Charles Co., Mo., November 19, 1856. PROF. O. J. WOOD-Dear Sir: Some time last summer we were induced to use some of your Hair Restorative, and its effects were so wonderful, we feel it our duty to you and the afflicted, to report it. Our little son's band for sume time had been perfectly.

erable, and I belive it to be sufficient to enable me as far as experience can, to form a proper conception of its nature and tendencies. Yet, in doing so, I do not mean to rely wholly upon my own experience, especially when my views are opposed by venerated christain character and talent. There is one touchstone by which I would test it. "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this light, it is because there is no light in them."

I propose then, to show that my views upon this subject, are supported by the bible, nature and experience. From the bible we learn that it was the practice in the earliest ages of the church, to give expression to the emotions of joy, gratitude, and thankfulness by dancing. Thus: "Miriam and her companions gave expression to their joy at deliverence from, and triumph over their enemies, the Egyptians." Exodus 15th and 20th.

"Thus, the daughter of Jephthah and her companions rejoiced at her father's safe return home after subduing the children of Ammon. Judges 11th and 34th.

"Thus, the women of all the cities of Israel came out to meet David and Saul, after having overthrown the Philistines." 1st Samuel 18th and 6th.

"Thus, David danced for joy and gladness when the ark was brought from Gibeah to Jerusalem." 2nd Samuel 6th 14th and 16th.

referred to, and likewise Matthew 11th and 17th, which all go to show that the dance was a common custom and source of amusement among the Jews, from the time of their escape, from Egypt until the time of the Saviour, and that it was used upon all occasions of national or individual joy or gladness, and it is noticeable that in the majority of the passages cited, music is mentioned as an accompaniment to the dance, plainly shewing that in the main at least, their dancing was very similar to our own. Yet, nowhere in the Bible is dancing denounced, which is very singular, if it be true, (as many of our leading divines unhesitatingly assert it is,) that dancing is immoral, and that its tendencies are only evil. It is singular that, when of such fearful magnitude and importance, should be omitted or forgotten. But I will go back again to the Bible, and refer to one the difference between the movements of a person at such a time, and when engaged in the dance ? save, that the one moves to regular time and music, and the other does not. Does the addition of music then, make those motions immoral or their tendencies evil? In conclusion, I will offer a few reflections upon those passages of scripture which have been adduced in support of my views. Would it have been deemed a suitable time to dance, that which Miriam choose immediately after a stupendous supernatural deliverance, the author of which all Israel knew and feared, had it been so great an evil as is frequently represented, or even so light and frivolous, as some would have us believe it? Or would it, in the case of the daughter of Jephthah and her companions, have been deemed worthy to celebrate a nation's joy at deliverance from oppression? In the case of David, when the Ark was being brought to Jerusalem, from the house of Obed Edom, it is stated that "he was girded with a linen ephod," an article worn only by the priests, shewing that he was ministering in a priestly capacity at the time, and to show how God approved what he did, when Michal, his wife, ventured to rebuke him for his conduct, God visited her with a judgment, which, to women of her nation and times, next to death, was the worst calamity that could befall her.

It is my pleasure to have the acquaintance of pious persons who dance, and who have frequently gone from the evening party to their knees, there to supplicate "Our Father

In Psalm 30th and 11th, the Psalms says: in Heaven," for his guidance and blessing, "Thou had turned my mourning into danc- and thank him for the mercies of the past ing." Psalms 149th and 150th, may also be day, of which, the privilege of dancing an hour with friends, endeared by the ties of blood, similarity of disposition, or personal attachment was not the least. And there is nothing in dancing to prevent those who are so inclined, from doing likewise.

Much more might be said to sustain the propriety of dancing, and to show, as I have endeavored to do, that the dance, when under the control of reason and judgment, is not immoral, or its tendencies evil. It may not be amiss to remark here, that what I have said, is not intended to illicit a discussion of the subject, but merely to set it in another light, and to the writer of this article, a more correct one than he has yet seen it in any public print, and if it prove the means of removing prejudice from the micds of any, hithevery other national sin was decried, both by | erto not fully assured of its innocence, will the prophets and the Saviour, that this one | fully answer the purpose of its preparation.
