Prof. O. J. Wood—Dear Sir: Some time last summer we were induced to use some of your Hair Restorative, and its effects were so wonderful, we feel it our duty to you and the afflicted, to report it.

Our little son's head for some time had been perfectly covered with sores, and some called it scald head. The hair almost entirely came off in consequence, when a friend, seeing his sufferings, advised us to use your Restorative; we did so with little hope of success, but, to our surprise, and that of all cur friends, a very few applications removed the disease entirely, and a new and luxuriant crop of hair soon started out, and we can now say that our boy has as healthy a scalp, and as luxuriant a crop of hair as any other child. We can, therefore, and do hereby recommend your Restorative, as a perfect remedy for all diseases of the scalp and hair.

Prof. O. J. Wood—Dear Sir: I have used two bottles of Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and can truly say it is the greatest discovery of the age for restoring and changing the Hair. Before using it I was a man of seventy. My Hair has now attained its original color. You can recommend it to the world without the least fear, as my case was one of the worst kind.

Yours respectfully,

THE VOYAGE OF LIFE. BY ETTA JEHLIN.

Sailing down the stream of time-Where my early years began,

Looking back to view the shore, To retrace them nevermore! Often by the way I've lost,

Little barques that sailed with me, Some were often tempest-tossed, Others sank into the sea. Eyes that beamed on me so bright

When I started on life's main; Closed, while yet 'twas morning light, Closed, and opened ne'er again. Hopes, that sparkled in the sun, Diamond-like on every wave, Sank, and only left a-grave! Still my little barque is sailing, Down the rapid stream of time; Sails are torn, and timbers failing-

Sank when billows burst upon-

Making for another clime. Hangs a rainbow over head, 'Mid the clouds a golden bar; And on ocean's darksome bed, Brightly glows the evening star.

And an angel, gathering up Hopes long buried in the sea, When I reach the heavenly port, Will restore them all to me

A Beautiful Romance in Real Life.

The New York correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune, tells the following charmng romance, which was summed up in the New York papers of Nov. 2d, in the following laconic style :-

MARRIED.—On the 1st inst., Mr. George Hubbard to Miss Elizabeth Bleecker Had-

That is the text. The sermon written out is as follows:—

Some years ago there lived in Boston a young nan, of one of the best families in the city, handsome, intelligent, well educated, of agree able manners and address, and exceedingly popular with all who knew him. Still he was more generally known as a "fast" young man, and noted for his extravagance in the expenditure of money, his disregard for those conventionalities and moralities of which society requires the observance of all within its pale. The result of such a career need not be described as it is seen every day in great cities, happening in despite of the imprudent. The last chance that seemed to be left for the reinstatement of the subject of our story in the good opinion of his friends, of himself, and of the world, was a voyage in some responsible capacity that should because equally parts of his way to ctarnity test the sincerity of his desire to redeem himself. By the aid of his friends he procured such an opportunity, and left his native city as the commander of a merchant vessel, bound on a long and somewhat hazardous voyage. In the course of it he found himself among the Fejee Islands, and having occasion to go ashore on one of them, he visited the rude dwelling of a native chief, who entertained him hospitably, and as he was about to depart, requested him to pray to the Christian's God with and for that savage family.

Here was a dillemma. The attitude and act of prayer had long been strange to the youth, and he was not prepared for such a request; and in default of ability to comply with it, the Fejee Chief (who had probably been visited and taught by some wandering missionary who had casually landed upon that Island) raised his voice in prayer, while the native of a Christian, and civilized land, himself unused to devotion, stood by and listened! Was not this a striking scene?-But mark the result. Our young sailor returned to the ship, and in due course of time to his home. Hastening to his brother, a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, residing in the neighborhood, he told him the story of the prayer he heard put up by a savage Islander, in that far off distant ocean, and confessed to him that that prayer had been followed by an answering effect, in the conversion of him who was so strangely called upon to listen to it. He now desired to redeem the time he had so sadly wasted, and to devote himself actively, and in the most self-sacrificing way, to the cause of religion. Steadily adhering to his purpose, he became a church member, a candidate for the orders in the church, and an accepted missionary to Africa, whither he is about to go, under the auspices of the Foreign Missionary Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church .-But not alone.

The incident of to-day, to which I referred in the commencement of my story, was the following:-

The services of the day being finished at Trinity Church, that suberb and spacious temple was almost immediately filled to overflowing by a crowd of expectant spectators of a most interesting scene. The clergyman alluded to in my narrative came in and took his place in the chancel. The front portals of the church were thrown open, and a bridal party entered and advanced to the altar, where a fair young bride (the daughter of one of the officiating minister's most respectable parishoners) was united in wedlock to the hero (for is he not hero?) of my narrative; whose labors as a missionary of Christianity, she has devoted herself to share with WILD PEOPLE.—In Lancaster, Louisiana, thing like a man, but hairy as a bear, has been seen frequently by the people. It is very wild and strong. It was once seen in a cow pen, sucking the cows, and when discovered started as if about to fight, then turned and fled, bounding like a deer. It walks upright and is supposed to be a wild man.

Fighting a Squatter.

ing city of Hannibal, on the Mississippi river, there were but few huts belonging to some hardy "squatter," and such a thing, as a steamboat was considered quite a sight, the following incident occurred:

A tall brawny woodsman stood leaning against a tree which stood upon the bank of the river, looking at some approaching object, which our reader would have readily discovered to have been a steamboat.

Now, among the many passengers on this boat, both male and female, was a spruce young dandy, with a killing moustache, &c., who seemed bent on making an impression on the hearts of the young ladies on board, and, to that end, he must perform some heroic deed. Observing our squatter friend, he imagined this to be a fine opportunity to bring himself into notice—so, stepping into the cabin, he said:

The ladies complied with the request, and our dandy drew from his bosom a formidable bowie-knife and thrust it into his belt; then taking a large horse-pistol in each hand, he seemed satisfied that all was right. Thus equipped, he strode on with an air which seemed to say: "the hopes of a nation depend on me!"

Marching up to the woodsman, he exclaimed: "Found you at last, have I? You are the man I've been looking for these three weeks. Say your prayers!" he continued, presenting his pistols, "you'll make a capital barn-door, and I'll drill the key-hole, my-

"I say, you, next time you come around drillin' key-holes, don't forget your old acquaintances!"

Decidedly Cool.—An Irishman, driven to desperation by the stringency of the money market and high price of provisions, procured a pistol and took to the road. Meeting a traveller, he stopped him with, "your money or your life!" Seeing that Pat was green, he said "I tell you what I'll do. I'll give you all my money for that pistol." "Agreed." Pat received the money and handed over the pistol. "Now," said the traveller, "hand back that money, or I'll blow your brains out." "Blaze away, my hearty" said Pat, "divil a dhrop of powther there's in it."

LOOK OUT LADIES!-It is currently reported that the various State Legislatures about to commence their sessions, will be urged by a strong corps of lobby men, to re-enact a law introduced in the English Parliament, in the year 1770, which ran as follows: "That all women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, wives, or widows, that shall, from and after such act, impose upon, seduce, and betray into matrimony, any of his majesty's male subjects by the scents, paints, cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high hecled shoes, bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft, sorcery, and like misdemeanors, and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void.

He came to California—but the cloud still hung over him. He was active, enterprising and persevering; yet, while others around him were gathering the golden harvest in abundance, his every object failed. For eight years he continued thus. He became sick, weary and dishearteend, but his pride would not allow him to write home for assistance. He was at last reduced to sell newspapers upon the street for a living. Down and Up.

In the year 1849, a young man, who was rich, and engaged in a lucrative business in Cincinnati, became enamored of a beautiful and amiable girl-the daughter, by the way, of wealthy parents, and after a brief court-ship, married her. He loved her dearly.— She loved him dearly. A fortune of happi-ness seemed in store for them; but evil days came, and after a brief but violent struggle with fortune, the young man became bankrupt. He was left without a dollar, but not

He was poorly dressed, but his affection conquered his pride, and he immediately made himself known to her. The recognition was followed by a beautiful exhibition of unabating and unfaltering love.— The lady's parents had died, leaving her an heiress of great wealth. She had not heard of her husband for eight years, and fearing for his safety, she resolved to visit this State and make enquiries for herself. The lady closed her conversation with her husband by putting her arms about his neck, and saying, "Now, dear George, we can go home and be happy as we used to be." They did go home on the steamer which left here last Monday. This story is strictly true.—California paper.

Plain Talk to Subscribers.

A late number of the Parkersburg Gazette talks as follows to its subscribers, who seem to forget that in such times as these, when business is dull and expenses high, publishers need every dollar due them:

To WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—The fact that the present proprietors of this paper, commenced its publication without any great amount of cash, but relied upon the promptness of its friends in paying up, is well known. Many of those friends have come forward and helped us along with the amount of their indebtedness; but a great many have allowed their subscription to run on, have let their job work and advertising accounts remain unsettled so long, that one of two alternatives is alone left to us-either or close the office.

Printers cannot live on air and promises, any more than other folks—common opinion to the contrary notwithstanding. The hands working for the editor must be paid, the paper maker's bill must be paid, the ink and type with which we print, must be paid for, the tailor, the farmer, the butcher, the hatter -everybody must be paid, or we must go naked and starve. As cold weather is setting in, we do not wish to go naked; as our stomachs naturally call for food, we do not feel inclined to turn a deaf ear to the cry; and as creditors are becoming exceedingly clamorous for that "little balance," we do not wish to be sold out to justify their demands when so many are owing us. Having dunned, dunned, dunned, until we have become tired of it, and having many liabilities which must be met soon, we must earnestly request our friends to come for-For poor and miserable as this life is, we ward and aid us in this, our hour of need .have all of us free access to all that is great | If it is the desire of the Gazette patrons for and good and happy; and carry within our- the paper to continue they must help us .selves a key to all the treasures that Heaven | If those who are indebted to the office would has to bestow upon us. The learned Le Clerc tells us that while he was complying his harmonys he was so course of Jesus, and so inflamed with the love of his most holy doctrine that he thought he had then just begun to be acquainted with what he had scarcely ever laid out of his hands from his infancy. Queen Elizabeth, who spent much of her time in reading the best writings of her own and former ages, has left on record the following :-"I walk many times in the pleasant fields A root set in the finest soil, and in the best of the holy scriptures, where I pluck the climate, and blessed with all that sun, air goodlisome herbs of sentences by pruning, and rain can do for it, is not in so sure a cat them by reading, digest them by musing, way of its growth to perfection, as every and lay them up at length in the high seat of memory by gathering them together so that having tasted their sweetness, I may less perceive the bitterness of life."

During the time that Dr. Kennicott was employed on his Polyglott Bible, it was the constant office of his wife, in their daily airings, which his immediate attention was called .his work was completed, upon her asking him what book she should take, "Oh," said he, "let us begin the Bible."—Primitive Church Magazine.

Speed of Railroad Trains.—An American traveler asserts that the speed of the British passenger trains exceeds that of the American, the average there being twenty-eight miles an hour. The weight of these trains is much less than that of the American, and the difference in speed is likewise accounted for by the lighter grades of the foreign lines. Besides this, the tracks are more carefully laid than is usual here; the cuttings are wider, the drainage more thorough, the ballasting twenty-six feet wide and two deep, the cross ties nine feet long, and, saturated either with coal tar, kreosote, or sulphate of copper. The rails almost uniformly weigh seventy-two pounds per yard, being in height five inches, and much more carefully manufactured than those which are shipped to this country. The good iron is kept for home consumption, while the refuse article is sent to us.

Somebody says, "every hour spent in debt, is a year spent in slavery." If that is so, we have quite a number of subscribers who delight to spend years in slavery.

Catch not too soon at an offence, nor give too easy away to anger. The one shows a weak judgment, and the other a perverse nature.
