CARRIER'S ADDRESS TO THE PATRONS OF THE

HUNTINGDON GLOBE.

JANUARY 1, 1859.

Awake! arise, from slumbering beds. And wash your faces, comb your heads, Draw on your boots, jump in your pants, And rush, with all the blandishments, That tailors lend, into the street Prepared to get your New Year's treat.

Fair maiden-throw your night-cap high, And open up your pretty eye, And twist your hair in many a curl, And all your silken sails unfurl: Put on your cheek a raddy glow With drippings from the virgin snow; Throw on the robes which silkworms wove And merchants brought from spicy grove; Attired thus in good bootce, Come in the street and list to me.

No organ, with a crank, have I. Nor monkey with a playful eye, Nor tambourine with tinkling bell. With which to please your fancy well. A simple poet sings his lay And scatters verses by the way. He prompts your gentle heart to treat And makes you shake your tiny feet. Dear calico-with beauty crowned, How I would like to move around And pour sweets ditties in your car, This youngest morning of the year, Until your cyes would showers leak, And pour in torrents down your check, Enough to turn a saw-mill wheel Or make a puddle for an eel.

But maiden, with the ruby lip, Whose nectar. I would love to sip, And see myself in your blue eye, The brightest star in beauty's sky, I must not waste my precious time, By hanging round this crinoline.

Now, Susy, "don't you cry for me," For I must sing my New Year's glee; Don't burst your waistband with your grief, For I can furnish no relief; Dry up your tears, compose your heart, For down the street, I now must start: So woman with the watery eye, I'll bid you now a short good bye.

I see great throngs of people here, Delighted with the new-born year. The happy swain, with kid-gloved hand, Supported by his light rattan, Is bowing to his Sarah Jane, And twisting like a weather-vane, As Sarah sends a winning glance, Or turns her azure eye askance.

Oh, Johnny-hold your beating heart-She wants to smash your vital part, And make a whiskered, mighty man, Obey the beckon of her hand. Your cagle eyes, keep opened wide, As you are walking by her side,

First broke upon Arch-Angel's sight. I do not wish to mesmerize This noble tenant of the skics, And while asleep, to steal his horn, With which to grace this New Year's morn : I mercly wish to frighten out The cchoes, in the dells, about,-And make them trip fantastic toe, On Terrace mountain, robed in snow ; Thence bound at once, in lively dance, To Pincy Ridge, and there entrance

So sweet as thine, since morning light

Who've come to see them "hoe it down." Dear patrons—is the music right, And has the dancing pleased your sight: If so, just lend a listening car ;---I wish you joy another year.

The people of this good old town,

Fair maiden, whom I left in tears, "Curflumixed" much, 'mid hopes and fears, I have a pile of shining dust, That I'll lay up, where moth nor rust, Nor nothing else, shall e'er invade, The treasures, I have this day made, Until I need them. Then, Susy, you Can have a portion of them, too.

Appearances Deceitful.

In one of the narrowest and dirtiest streets in Paris, on the ground floor of a crumbling old house, is the shop of Monsieur Thomas, a rag merchant. In the back part is a sort of a glass office, in which an exceedingly pretty girl not long since transacted the business of the establishment. This young girl was Mademoiselle Julies, old Thomas' daugh-

Not a great while ago an elegant looking young gentleman chanced to pass through the dirty street, and involuntarily stopped to admire her. The next day he came again, but it was not chance that brought him there this time; for, after pausing on the street as before, he entered the shop under the pretence of asking the way, but in reality to approach nearer the object of his sudden admiration. A very few words sufficed to confirm and fasten first impressions, and he was about to go away in a very disconsolate state of mind, when, in among the old junk which the shop contained, he observed a pile of old books. Seizing upon the excuse to prolong his stay, the young man turned over the tattered refuse, and purchased several of the books. promising the fair saleswoman that he would from time to time replenish his library at her establishment. He must have been very studious that day, for early the next morning he returned and obtained another supply. So, too, the next, and next, until troubling himself no longer about the old books, he came ar customs and almost incredulous dishes of and passed much of his time in soft converour underground neighbors—the Chinese.— But the following, written by one who mixes with them daily, in California, we give as to are equally exposed for sale; the one being appearance, he at once granted his prayer, on condition that the demand should be offihowever, are not freely bought after they cial, by the gallant's father. Here was the have been fed on animal diet, except by the difficulty. The father of the lover, M. Georges, was a dry-goods merchant, having a handmilk and rice on purpose for the table. In some store in one of the most brilliant quarthe markets at Canton, I have observed, side | ters of the city, and he looked for something the markets at Canton, I have observed, side by side, a pheasant and a cat; and, upon en-quiry, found them to bear precisely the same value. The cormorant, the wild duck, the hawk and the pigeon, being respectively in-dulged in by the bon virant, while the salted rat, dried in the sun seemed to be an object of peculiar relish. Previous to their putting this animal to death, they frequently inflict up-on it the most excruciating agony; whether or not upon the some principle that we consider not upon the some principle that we consider | that the ridiculous figure the old man would a hunted have more delicate than one that | cut, and his inability to give his daughter a

2. Because the innumerable objects there to be seen are vasily more beautiful than any of carth.

3. Because a resurrection body will be united to the soul of the believer, more glorious by far than the present one.

4. Because the intellect, with all its wondrous faculties, will be greatly strengthened, enlarged and perfected.

5. Because Heaven is a place of entire freedom from immortality and vice, from sin and temptation.

6. Because it is a place of never-tiring acivity.

7. Because it is a place of quiet rest and weet repose.

8. Because of its music, in which there is no discord, but the most enrapturing melo-

9. Because it is a region of love-pure, intense and seraphic love.

10. Because the christian there, shall meet beloved friends that have gone before, and welcome those who follow after.

11. Because the saved will engage in the most pleasant and agreeable employments. 12. Because all mysteries will be cleared up, and every problem solved. 13. Because Heaven is a home, a sacred home, where the social affections can be fully developed. 14. Because there will be a constant increase of knowledge, virtue, happiness and holiness. 15. Because we can there mingle with patriarchs, apostles, and the noble army of maryrs of every age.

16. Because the redeemed will enjoy the society of that higher order of beings, the angels, those elder brethren of ours, who are possessed of such warm sympathies and lofty attributes.

17. Because there is no night there, but all is brightness unspeakable. 18. Because it is a Sabbath of devotional exercises and holy worship. 19. Because God the Father is there.

Because God the Son is there. 20.

21.Because God the Spirit is there.

IKE PARTINGTON AND PUGILISM .--- Mrs. Partington was much surprised to find Ike, one rainy afternoon, in the spare room, with the rag-bag hung to the bed-post, which he was belaboring very lustily with his fists as large as two one cent apples.

"What gymnastiness are you doing here?" aid she, as she opened the door,

He did not stop, and merely replying training," continued to pitch in, She stood

"training," continued to pitch in, She stood looking at him as he danced around the bag, busily punching its round sides. "That's the Morrisey touch," said he, giv-ing one side a dig, "and that," hitting the other side, "is the Benicia Boy." She said : "Stop !" and he immediately stopped after he had circon the last blar for Morriere he had given the last blow for Morrissey .---"I am afraid the training you are having isn't good," says she, "and I think you had better train in some other company. I thought your going into compound fractures in school would be dilatorious to you. I don't know who Mr. Morrissey is, and don't want to, but I hear that he has been whipping the Pernicious Boy, a poor lad with a sore leg, and I think he should be ashamed of himself." Ike had read the "Herald, with all about the great prize fight" in it, and

The shifting scene presents a view Not altogether rare or new. Young men and women, girls and boys Are eating sugar-candy toys. Huge roosters melt upon the tongue, With things that must remain unsung-While ginger cakes, and pretzels too, With lager beer, are lost to view. How happy you are, all-and gay-While moving up and down the way-As though "spondoolicks" were as flush, As torrents that from hill-sides gush. Right glad, am I, your pocket books Present such soul-enticing looks; For ere the shades of evening come, I do expect to pick out some Nice quarters from their hiding place, And to my pocket, gently trace The silver shiners-burnished bright-And rather pleasant to the sight. Begone, old levy : And thou fip, With which was purchased many a "nip;" By which said nips, were lowly laid, So many men of every grade: By which, the mother's check grew pale, And household goods were put to sale; And lovely daughters, sprightly boys, Were robbed of all their earthly joys, Begone, I say; I like you not, You ngly piece,-this train of thought Suggests, that you have spent your time, About the haunts of vice and crime. You look so dirty, dinged and queer, You must have lived, where lager beer And blear-eyed whiskey have been swilled, And moving rum-casks have been filled. Unnumbered fights, you've seen, no doubt, And whiskey suckers tumbled out, Pell-mell, dead level with a dog, When you, the last, were spent for grog. If you had staid at home at night, And kept your face, both clean and bright, And not associated with Bad company, their kin and kith, You could have shown as rich a tint, As quarter dollars from the mint. Within the year, just "gone to pot," The panic, like a whirl-wind, caught Proud, airy castles, floating high, Like clouds along an evening sky, And dashed the vapors to the ground, And strewed the shadows, all around. The comet came to take a view Of many worlds it never knew; Then switched its tail and bade good bye. And broke for a remoter sky.

The cable in the occan's bed-For jolly lightnings, there to tread-O'er coral reefs, through beds of sand, Has wound its way from land to land : And there it lies, as mute as daath,-De Sauty cannot give it breath.

Now, patrons, I could longer sing, And make the upper heavens ring With notes so varied, rare and rich, That Gabriel might his trumpet pitch, From frontal parapet on high, Down, through the clear cerulean sky, And say to me,-young man of song-My silver trumpet take along, Where o'er you go,-for I must own, I no er have listened to a tone,

MATERNAL JOYS .- An exchange perpetrates the following scandal:

"Ba-a-a-a, ba-a-a-a !" shrieked a half-naked infant, of about eighteen months old. "What's the matter with mawma's thweet little duckey ?" says the affectionate mother, while she presses it to her bosom, and the young serpent, in return, digs its talons into her face. "Da', den, Missus, I know what little Master Sim wants," exclaimed the cherub's negro nurse. "You black huzzy, why didn't you tell me, then ?" and the infuriated mother gives Dinah a punch in the chops with her shoe. "Why, he wants to put his foot into dat pan ob graby," whimpered the unfortunate darkey. "Well, why don't you bring it here, you aggravating nigger ?" replied the mother of the bawling little one. Dinah brings the pan with the gravy, and little Sim put his bare feet into it, and dashes the wilk-warm grease about his sweet little shanks, to the infinite gratification of his mamma, who tenderly exclaimed, " Did mamma's little Simmy want to put his teeny weeny tooties in the gravy? It shall paddle in the pan as it soysey vooseys, and then it shall have its poozey red frock on, and go and see its pappy pappy."

100 The Investigator tells a good story of the great "revival" in Wisconsin. Among the converts was one whose previous profession had been "three card monte." Times being somewhat hard, he found little profit in his legitimate "practice," and became 'converted," as the elders say. One night, at the suggestion of an elder, he rose to edify | dead. the congregation with his experience, and thus "delivered" himself: "Ladies and gentlemen-I mean brothers and sisters; the so happy before in all my life-(embar-rassed)-I never felt so happy before in all my life-(very much embarrassed)---if unyone thinks I ever did, they can get a lively bet out of me !"

"O! pray mother," cried young Georges,

"Not at all, young man," interrupted M. Thomas. " Let us talk of it at once, as your mother wishes. A little money does a newly married couple no harm, certainly. If Madame will say how much it is proposed to give her son, I will try to furnish a like sum." "We intend," observed Madame Georges, with a superb air, "to give our son fifty thousand francs, sir."

"Well, well," said Thomas, with a shrug, 'I must say I expected better than that for my little girl's husband; but as the young beople love each other, I will throw no objection in the way. Julie is my only child, and on the day of her marriage I shall give her four hundred thousand francs, money down."

It may readily be imagined that the Georges 'changed their gait" in a hurry about this time. But now come another difficulty. Expecting to frighten old Thomas off, Madame Georges had rather stretched the truth in naming fifty thousand frances as her son's wedding present, and both she and her husband were now very anxious to see their son so richly married. Sacrifices were made. and loans negotiated, in order to gather up the sum mentioned.

we saw several Irish laborers trying to decipher a written notice headed " Public Sale," the notice, although written tolerably plain, could not be read by the Emeralders, and they requested us to read it for them, which we of course did. At the conclusion one of them turned to his comrades, and remarked, in a very impressive tone :---

"Well, be jabers, I'll never buy of a man who's so nagardly that he won't get his advertisements printed; he's chated the printer and he'd chate me." They all acquiesced in his decision.—Ex.

BOP Down East there resides a certain M. D. One very cold night he was aroused from his slumbers by a very loud knocking at his door. He went to the window and asked: "Who's there?"

" Friend."

"What do you want ?"

"Want to stay here all night." "Stay there, then," was the benevolent reoly, and down went the sash.

VELOCITY OF THE WIND .--- When the wind moves at the rate of one mile an hour, it is hardly perceptible, at two miles an hour, it fans us as the gentle zephyr, and at six, it becomes gentle wind. From ten to twenty, it becomes high, and thirty to fifty, characteristic storms, from light to hard ; at eighty miles an hour, it becomes a hurricane, and at one hundred, a tornudo.

E Two Irishmen were going to fire off a cannon, just for fun; but being of a rather economical turn of mind, they did not wish to lose the ball. So one of them took an iron kettle in his hand to catch it in, and stationing himself in front of the loaded piece, he exclaimed to the other who stood behind it, holding a lighted torch, "Touch it aisy Tommy !"

A Dutchman in one of the middle counties of Pennsylvania, wanted a minister to preach at his child's funeral, and wasn't unreasonably particular as to who came .---"Chon," said he, "go and tell the circus preacher to come, and if he can't come, den get the locust preacher, and if the locust preacher can't come, why den get the extortioner" (exhorter.)
