THE GLOBE.

Huntingdon, Wednesday, Jan. 19, 1859. LOCAL & PERSONAL.

BEAUX WANTED .- We are not in the habit of advertising for husbands, but we think it is truly advisable, when young ladies become so "hard up" for beaux, as to appeal to the printer to advocate their cause. Such is the case at the present time, and we are surprised that so many of our young men should so love the intoxicating bowl and rowdyism, as to forget the ladies entirely. We were requested last week, to inform the young men of our town, that five beaux are wanted, to come well recommended. The ladies are all young, good looking, intelligent, and agreeable. This is a capital chance for some of our young men, and we sincerely hope that they will avail themselves of the opportunity. For further information, apply to the ladies at their homes.

It may not be amiss, on this occasion, for us to give the ladies a few words of advice. Ladies, we want to see a reform in the young men of our borough, and if you would take more notice of them, and encourage them into your society more, there would be less drunkenness and rowdyism on our streets after nightfall. The young men would then have some place to pass the evenings, instead of visiting the taverns and lager beer saloons of our borough, and drinking such beverages as are now-a-days sold at these places. You have a mighty influence over them, and we think it is your duty to exercise that influence to a certain extent, and instead of casting off a young man when you see him reelfirst time, under the cursing influence of to find him. "strychnine whiskey," or some other drug equally as bad, you should try to reform him. Go and talk to him, persuade him, tell him of the evil consequences attending it, and if you can't reform him, no person else can. We say, then, after you have used all your influence to no purpose, you are at liberty to discard him, as lost forever. The suggestions above, brought forth what we have written, and we candidly believe were such the case, we would not have to record so many cases of drunkenness every week. Ladies. think over what we have said, and try your hand at what we have been trying to effect for a long time, but in vain. We do not despair yet, however, but hope to see this kind of human debauchery brought speedily to an BRUTAL ASSAULT .- On Wednesday night last, as Louis Sharrar, a Frenchman, and a quiet, inoffensive man, acting in the capacity of hostler, for N. Williams de Co., of the "Farmer's Home," was passing along Washington street, he was met by two drunken negroes, William Cook and John Hanson, who demanded whiskey of him. He informed them that he had none, whereupon, they commenced a most brutal attack upon him, beating him in a most shocking manner, and had it not been for the timely assistance of some of our citizens who were passing by, he would, no doubt, have been killed. Cook has long been known to our citizens, as a saucy, impudent, and insulting blackguard, ready at all times to molest any person coming in his way. All such unmitigated, thieving scoundrels as Cook, should be banished from a respeciable community, and we hope all like villains will be speedily made away with in some way or other, we don't care how, so we get rid of them. Cook and Hanson were arrested next morning, and as Court was in session, they were brought-up for trial, immediately, and convicted of assault and battery. The Judge has not sentenced them yet. We trust, however, when he does, that he will have no mercy on them, but give them the fullest extent of the law, as Cook richly deserves it ten times over. A pistol and butcher knife were found on Cook after he was arrested, which proves conclusively, that he was out for something of the kind. Sharrar is recovering rapidly.

"STOLEN-A VALUABLE HOUR!"-Under this caption, the Philadelphia Evening Journal hits off a class of persons—time stealers -in a most graphic style. These despoilers are not an unusual class in our town, as elsewhere. The remark has been made more than once since this great world was set a-rolling, that time is precious. It waits for no man On singing maidens and fighting men -on flower gardens and battle-fields-on joy and sorrow, hope and dispair, love and hatred, the night falls, and the sun rises, with unsparing regularity. The minutes are very precious, every one of them. We cannot afford to let them drift unheoded by. The current widens and quickens for eternity's ocean, and we are affoat. There is work to John Porter, do, and not more than enough time to do it G. Dorsey Green. in.

Let sin and shame and sorrow be upon every one of us who wastes this heavenly treasure. If any mortal be willing to incur the fearful responsibility of sloth, his be the COL JOHN A. DOYLE, settling account! But a weightier and graver charge is against him who squanders the time of others. He is more than a spendthrift. He is a thief. Earthly law cannot JAMES ALLISON, reach him. He is often genteel and respectable. He wears fine clothes and uses choice Geo. W. McBude, language. The fragrant atmosphere of a good reputation surrounds him. His lips distil honey and breathe melody. He drops gently in when the muscles are all strained and the brow burning with the heat and toil

Was passing by and thought be would just POCKET MAPS OF THE WESTERN STATES, new or important-have you? Thinks a great deal about the weather, says all he thinks, How busy you are! Don't stop!

And then an irregular fire of reminiscences, reflections, speculations, prophesies, and hearsays-all very sapient and surprising, no doubt-until the brain reels, and the nerves quiver, and patience cozes out in great angry drops of perspiration, and common courtesy becomes a heroism, and from the troubled soul goes up a sigh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, or inaccessible attic, with only one door, and that one bolted on the inside!

We shut up in grated cells those who rob us of our money or goods. We knock down those who rob us of our reputation, or forever "cut" and shun them. But we can do nothing with those who steal our time. We are at their mercy. Will they not pause on our threshold, and consider well before they turn our door latch?
