The Garden---No. 1.

[For the Huntingdon Globe.]

Gardening is one of the most attractive employments. It is a great pleasure after planting and sowing the seeds, and waiting hopefully their germination to watch the increasing development of plants and flowers until we are rewarded for our care and labor in the enjoyments of their fruits and bloom .----What fruits and vegetables are more delicious than those of our own production ?---What plants and flowers are more beautiful than those of our own culture? To cultivate a grape vine, from which in a few years we may gather bushels of fruit, requires no more care or labor, and takes up no more ground than does a hill of corn. And nothing tends more to beautify and embelish our homes than the flowers that bloom in our yards and gardens, and the vines that encircle our arbors and trellises.

In our latitude, spring work is in order this month, and manuring, spading and plant-ing, may be commenced, when the weather will admit of it and the ground is sufficiently dry. The rubbish, if any has been left since last fall to litter up the garden, should be raked up and burned. Where boards are used around the sides of beds, they should be straightened and firmly fastened to their places, and low, wet places drained. If the weather promises to be mild, a great many things can be done to facilitate the work when warm weather has fully set in. Grape vines should have been pruned before this time. It is best to do it in the fall. Uncover any vines of the tender kinds, which have been buried in the fall, and fork in a good dressing of manure. The ground should be woll drained about the vines, and made dry and light. Roots and cuttings should now be planted. Cuttings of currants and gooseberries should now be put in, and rooted plants set out.

A portion of peas, windsor beans, lettuce radishes and onions for early use, may now be put in. Cabbage seed may be sowed .--Asparagus beds may be uncovered, and a top dressing of manure and salt given them. Rake off the winter covering of strawberries and top dress with fine well rotted manure. Procure and sow seeds of the winter cherry, (Physalis,) they make excellent preserves, and are highly recommended for pies, and can be kept all winter. A hot bed is a very convenient appendage to every garden, large enough to raise vegetables for a family.-Lettuce, cabbage, cauliflowers, radishes, cucumbers, melons and tomatoes may be had from four to six weeks earlier than usual by taking a little time to do this work at a season, which can be easily spared from other occupations Peppers, egg plants, &c., which are always killed by the early frosts when they are in full bearing, would produce a good crop if started in a hot bed and transplanted into the open ground a little after the first of May. A hot bed eight or ten feet long and three or four feet wide, would be amply sufficient for a family.

The Lock Haven Democrat, edited by Mr. monwealth, speaking of the nominees of the late Convention, says :---

"The Democratic candidates now in the field are in every respect unexceptionable, and neither of them approve the unjust and violent policy of the Convention that nominated them."

The Pittsburgh Daily Post, the Harrisburg State Sentinel, the Doylestown Democrat, the Berks county Democrat, the Perry county Democrat, the Westmoreland county Republican, the Ebensburg Mountaineer, the Chester county Democrat, the Washington county Review, the Somerset Democrat, the Pottsville Register, the Allentown Democrat, the Carlisle American, the Williamsport Gazette, the Philadelphia Press, the Armstrong Democrat, the Clinton county_Democrat, all DEM-OCRATIC, denounce the action of the late Convention, in its unjust attack upon Governor Packer.

We hope something may be done by the riage contract between Horace B. and Emily L. Fry. A minority report was presented by a member of the committee, in which he states his reasons for dissenting from the action of the majority. Several veto messages from the Governer were received and read. THURSDAY. SENATE.-Mr. Gazzam read in place a bill to regulate the charges of railroad companies. A bill was passed entitled an act to incorporate the Franklin High School and Normal Institute Association of the borough of Martinsburg, Blair county. House.—A bill entitled "an act to make decrees for the payment of money in equity proceedings, liens upon real estate, with the right to revive or continue the liens of the same by writ of scire facias" passed finally. Petitions and reconstrances were presented as follow, viz: one from Bradford county praying that the state constitution may be so amended as to confer on colored persons equal privileges with whites; one from Huntingdon co. against annexing any part of Dublin twp. to Fulton county; one from the same county for the abolition of the office of County Superintendent; one against the passage of a law prohibiting fishing with nets and seines in Aughwick creek and its tributaries; one from Brady township for a law authorizing the school directors to enter and occupy land for school purposes; one from Shade Gap against any change in the method of collecting state and county taxes. The House concurred in the amendment of the Senate fixing the 14th of April as the day for the final adjournment of the Legislature.

The consideration of a supplement to the act incorporating the Philadelphia and Trenton, and bills relative to Philadelphia passenger railways, occupied considerable time. JUNIATA.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE GLOBE.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 7, 1859. MR. EDITOR :--- In my last letter I gave you a short account of my first day in this pleasant City. On Sunday morning, I made my way to the Jefferson street M. E. Church, to visit the Sunday School. In this school I found between three and four hundred interesting pupils. The officers of the school being Diffenbough, Deputy Secretary of the Com- rather indulgent, there is not the prevailing good order, which I have seen in many of our own Sunday Schools. After the school was closed, we ascended to the upper part of the church and heard Rev. J. W. Cleaver preach a sermon from Heb. 12th chap. 1st v. to an attentive congregation. In the afternoon I had the pleasure of addressing the above mentioned Sabbath School, and also visited a Mission School in the same part of the City. I was much pleased at the respect paid to the Sabbath in Baltimore. The Sabbath I spent in the City was one of those bright sunny days which one might think March had stolen from May.

> Eolus had granted a truce of a day in orler to find time to replenish his bellows for fresh blow, and Sol taking advantage of the Storm King's absence, came forth in his beauty and strength to tell of coming Spring. The church bells pealed forth their cheerful notes, calling the people up to Zion's hill, and every heart seemed to respond, "A day in thy courty (is better than a thousand."-Not denying that there is much wickedness in every City, justice compels me to say, that I witnessed less loafing about the streets during | law allows, and the feeling of the people bethe Sunday I was in Baltimore, than is generally to be seen in our small towns. On Monday we went to the western part of the City and dined with Dr. C. C. Richardson .-The Doctor is one of nature's noble men, and a comment on the southern hospitality.

Tribute to the Memory of Dr. Lorain. At a meeting of the members of the Medicinal Profes-sion of Clearfield county, held March 9, 1859, at the office of Dr. R. V. As the brother-in-law and pupil of the late Prof. Dewees, of the University of Pennsylvania, he set at the feet of a great medical Ganaliel. Most men in most vocations, have individuality. Dr. Lovain was distinguished by marked traiks admirable in his profession. To be sent for—to be called in, was for him to go at once. Nothing delayed or prevented him.— Dispatch was not only the word, but the act. Quick to decide, and generally prompt to execute, he would go, prescribe, and generally prompt to execute, be would go, prescribe, and possibly be half-way back, before many a urdy practitioner would be well on the way. He accom-plished a great deal, in a short time. Delay or inattention was never laid to his charge. The summons to the bed-side of the poor was obeyed with as much alacrity, as that to the more favored of fortune—and their grateful tears be-dew his memory. Though his field of labor was wide and rough, he nover hesitated. His habit was energy; and so it continued to be until his bodily infirmities began to bear upon him. not be taken up until two or three weeks after they are done blooming. Early in autumn is the best time for transplanting them.

The cultivation of flowers is an employment adapted to every grade, the high and the low, the rich and the poor. The pleasing and natural lesson which they convey is instructive to the most intelligent and refined, as well as to those of more humble canacities and acquirements. Who does not love flowers? What man is to be pitied who can derive no qualification from their gratification? Solomon thought it not beneath his dignity to make himself acquainted with the structure and nature of the vegetable kingdom, "from the sedar of Lebanon to the hysops on the wall." Kings and Emperors have been delighted with flowers, and the highest dignitary that ever graced our earth called the attention of his followers to the beauty of flowers when he said, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin, and yet, I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these.

"It has been said by travelers that they could distinguish a pure minded and more intelligent family, from the appearance of the house and grounds. The house was sursounded with flowers-the windows displayed them-vines were twined with care and taste over the dwolling. Another presented a different spectacle; weeds and briers were allowed to hold dominion, and Solomon's picture of the garden of the sluggard is exactly verified."

"Who can forget the vine planted by his ried hues, and the lilac and honey-suckle, and the rose bush planted by the hands of a sister. O! who can recur to those scenes of holiest emotions of his nature. Scenes that are gone never to return, among the fondest recollections of which, mingle the cultivation of flowers? M.

TO PREVENT CONVULSIONS .--- The following curious mode of preventing a convulsion, commonly called "a fit," is given in the Charleston Medical Journal and Review in a long article on the Treatment of Epilepsy, by Wm. M. Cornell, M. D., of Boston :

"I have employed various means to ward off an epileptic attack for the time being .--Stretching the muscles powerfully will generally prevent an attack; for example, when the aura commences in the great toe, or in the leg, strong traction or elongating the toe, or stretching the muscles of the leg, will carry the patient over the threatened attack for the time; or, when the patient has premonitory symptoms of an attack, opening the jaws as widely as can be done, and placing some hard substance between the teeth, to keep the mouth open, will have the desired effect. I have had one patient who by taking my advice, carried a piece of iron with him for a jaws to their utmost capacity, and keeping ally been the precursors of the great ones, or the "fits," he has immediately drawn from finally.

In the afternoon, friend Cleaver and self. took the cars on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, for the Relery house, 9 miles from Baltimore.

Some were singing darkey melodies, others crying, and still others showing their ivory, as they went off in one of those yah, yah, yahs, that make a darkey shake his marrow bones "fit too kill." All at once the iron horse gave a scream, the darkies yelled. the conductor shouted "all aboard"-we settled back in our seats, and away we went .---We soon reached our getting-off place, and started on a walk of two miles, to visit my friend's old charge, at the "Baltimore Co. Manual labor school." Here we were kindly received and entertained by Mr. Charles Counselman, the Superintendent of the school. The school is under the control of a board of managers who take under their care orphan boys, who are in want, and clothe, feed and educate them; requiring them to work on the farm during part of the day.

Many of the boys they have raised now occupy important positions in life; others are now securing that mental and moral training calculated to bring out manly principles; and many of them will, in all probability, become useful wheels in the great machinery of human progress.

WEST TOWNSHIP, March 28, 1859.

MR. LEWIS :- As great improvement has been made in the common schools, in various parts of our county during he past few years, I thought it not amiss to make a few remarks in reference to the Juniata School, (near Neff's mills.) Examinations and an Exhibition was held there during the 25th and 26th inst., decidedly the most reditable to teacher and pupils, and most interesting to spectators of any that has been held in this section of the country. The interest increased with the progress of the exercises, and on the last night of the Exhibition, the

The unusually quiet borough of Greensbur was the scene of a most extraordinary affair last night. It appears that a colored man named Ben Ware, was suspected of being more intimate with a white woman than the ing decidedly anti-amalgamation, they resolved to deal summarily with him and punish the fellow a la Judge Lynch. Full of this determination, and, perhaps, of whisky, but this makes no difference, as Greensburg whisky "ain't hard to take," and "never hurts nobody," a party resolved last night to clean "Ben" out. Meeting at a certain point they started for his house, but recollecting on the way, that Glibert Sterling, another man of color, had been accused of a like offence, they repaired to his house first, and, will our readers believe it, levelled it to the ground .--Ware's tenement was next pulled down, and, subsequently, a fine two story house belonging to D. Abercrombie, also colored, was reduced to a heap of ruins. The number engaged in this high handed outrage, is estithem were men of standing and respectabili-ty, and it surprises us that their names should be coupled with such a transaction. The men may have transgressed. They may have violated the laws of God and the land, but sure-ly there was another way of punishing them than that adopted. The law was open for rethem were men of standing and respectabili-

ALSO—Lot No. 23 in the old town plot of than that adopted. The law was open for re-dress of any wrongs they might have inflicted on individuals or society, and to itrather than to a self constituted band of "Regulators," their punishment should have been left.— Pittsburgh Chronicle of Thursday. For THE Salem (Mass.) Register says that a domestic in the kitchen of a wealthy man in a neighboring town lost her father, and the expense of the burial fell on the daugh-ter. Her employer owed her, $10, and at her request he paid her, and advanced her $15 more; and on a subsequent settlement charged her interest on the $15, for fifteen charged her interest on the $15, for fifteen weeks. She was at work at $1 per week .--
