[For the Globe.] God is love. How plainly do we see this written on all things around us. The little flowers lift up their gentle heads and lisp it to the bees as they go humming to their daily toil; the moon and stars whisper it in their nightly courses o'er the sleeping world; the sun throwsitin golden words from planetto planet; the rivers run murmuring it to the sea; the summer winds sing it o'er the springing corn and waving grain; old ocean bearing on her heaving bosom ships laden with the luxuries of other climes, roars it forth in her low hoarse notes, to the listening isles and rocky shores; angels whispered it in Adam's cars, while he slept in Eden's bowers, clothed in sinless innocence; and Time, the oldest child of Eternity, has proclaimed it ever since, to Adam's apostate race. But all these, harmoniously blended, have not been able to tell the story so interestingly, so sweetly, as does the book of books, God's own revealed word. Here we have it so plainly written, on almost every page, that none can mistake its truth.-"The way-faring man though a fool need not err therein." Here, O! man see yourself as in a glass. Behold the horrid contortions of your face, the writhing of your limbs, as you lie bound in the galling chains of sin. Have you any reason to expect that God will love you, when you hate him with all the bitter enmity of your heart? No, you dare not hope for such a thing. Why then are men saved? Do you reply "because God needs their services?" Ask the angels. Angels, does your majestic Creator need our services to add to his glory? The angel's reply -"Need your services!" "Why our happy companions, who once wandered with us amid the celestial groves, and mingled their voices with ours, in singing lofty hymns of praise to our great Creator, long since rebelled with Lucifer, the "son of the morning," were east out of heaven and doomed to eternal misery. The sceptre of merey has never been held out to them. But angels, human voices are melodious; are we not needed to assist in the choirs of heaven? The angels reply-"O vain presumptuous mortal! Thinkest thou not, that Michael, with the stentorian voice, with which he assembled the armies of heaven, to war against Satan and his apostate crew, can lead in the shrill tenor? That the angels that rejoiced 'when the morning stars sang together' at the world's creation, can sing the Soprano. That Seraphim and Cherubim, can wind from their golden harps the low, warbling alto? That the thunders, rushing after the fiery winged lightnings, can sweep the keys of heaven's orchestra, and call forth her deep

God needs not the services of men. Why then are men saved? Nature speaking with a thousand voices cannot tell. The plan of salvation was a mystery to angelic beings .-Divine revelation alone furnishes a satisfactory solution to the question.

The grand scheme of human redemption, originated in God's unbounded love to men. "Heroin is the love of God manifested: that while we were yet without strength, in due | MAILORING! TAILORING!! time, Christ died for the ungodly."

Meeting a Sermon. Archdencon Leighton, returning home one morning, was asked by his sister, "have you been hearing a sermon?" "I have met a sermon," was the answer. The sermon he had met was a corps on its way to the grave; the preacher was Death. Greatest of street preachers! No laws nor penalties can silence him. No tramp of horses, nor rattling of carriages, nor rush and din of crowded streets drown his voice. In heathen, Papal and Protestant countries, in monarchies and free States, in town and country, the solemn pomp of his discourse is ever going on. In some countries, a man is imprisoned for even dropping a tract. But what prison will hold this awful preacher? What chains will bind him? He lifts up his voice in the very presence of tyrants, and laughs at their threats. He walks unobstructed through the midst of their guards, and delivers those messages which trouble their security and embitter their pleasures. If we do not meet his sermons, still we cannot escape them. He comes to our abodes, and, taking the dearest objects of our love as his text, what terrible sermon does he deliver to us! O what weeping audiences sometimes has this silent preacher! Yet there is a secret doctrine, an occult meaning, running through his discourses, which is often not apprehended. Few "lay it to heart." His oft-repeated sermons still enforce the same doctrine, press upon us the same exhortation. "Surely, every man walketh in a vain show. Surely, they are disquieted in vain. Here there is no continuing city. Why are you laboring for that BUILDING-HARDWARE, MECHANICS TOOLS. which I will presently take from you and give to another? Take no thought for the
