J. SIMPSON AFRICA.

You are a Liar.—How often do we hear this sentence repeated by men, old and young, man doubts the word of another, let him say ware! so in a gentlemanly manner, instead of bringing out "You are a liar." For shame! We see no use in it at all. No man of sense will use it. Furthermore, no honest and sincere man will swallow the dose. Neither should he. The one has just as good a right to strike the other, as his neighbor had to call him a liar.

The idea of bringing forth this article was first projected by a conversation which passed between some friends standing on a "You are a liar," was used by some of the it, neither should any man take it from his there. fellow-man, without resenting the same, for no person has any business to indulge in such language. We are often surprised, yea, astonished, at boys scarcely able to toddle, use the phrase, "You are a d-d liar. For shame, men and boys, stop it at once. It adds nothing to your manliness or character, but rather decreases it in the eyes of all sensible and high-minded people.

A FACT.—One day last week, our fellowtownsman, Dr. J. S. Griffith, performed the operation of cutting a cancer from the side of a man's neck, which was as hard as a stone. He took the cancer home with him, put it in a vial, and not having any alcohol just at hand, and happening to have some tanglefoot whiskey in his office, he filled the Church, a valuable hair bow. The finder vial with it, and in twenty-four hours the will confer a favor by leaving the same at whisky had caten the cancer almost up; in | this office. forty-eight hours, there was nothing to be seen of it at all. Now, in the name of common sense, what can these men's stomachs be like, who drink this poisonous tanglefoot whisky, that is drugged to such an extent with poisonous acids, that in forty-eight hours it will eat entirely up a substance so hard that it is almost impossible to make an impression in it with a knife? We would ling, at the base of stupendous mountains, this same tanglefoot whiskey eats them up before they are aware of it.

A fellow by the name of Helfright, hailing from Petersburg, and who had imbibed too freely of tanglefoot whiskey, while attending darkey Camp Meeting, became unruly, and commenced abusing the ladies .-He struck one lady in the mouth, loosening two or three of her front teeth. On Thursday evening last, some of the boys amused themselves awhile, by squirting water over the diamond with the little Juniata engine. Later, they got out the old Phonix, and hauled her about the streets, squirting here and there, to the delight of 'Young America." Mr. Lewis:-I was in your town last week, and meeting a politician on the street, who supposed I was all right, and willing to enter into any arrangements with the faithful to prevent Mr. Africa from receiving votes from his numerous personal friends in the 'People's Party," immediately set about giving me instructions how to proceed: I was to try to make every body in my neighborhood believe that Africa is, and always has been an infidel, and consequently is not, and cannot be an honest man, and is unworthy the confidence and support of his fellow-citizens, and must be defeated. After hearing my very kind instructor through, I very bluntly informed him that for several years I have had an intimate acquaintance with Mr. Africa, and knew the charges and insinuations against him to be false, and that, although he did not belong to my party, I would vote for him because I considered him the best man for the office, and his conduct through life more that of a good citizen and a christian than any of his traducers could lay claim to. I am really astonished that the more considerate men in the "People's party" of your town, permit their party and their ticket to be injured by low, unscrupulous politicians. If Mr. Africa should be elected he may thank independent voters, like myself, who will not sanction by their votes, the use of dishonorable means to defeat a political opponent.

By giving the above a place in your respectable paper you will oblige several independent voters in my neighborhood in the LOWER END.

SEPTEMBER 10, 1859.

Mr. Editor: -I have had the pleasure of attending, as a guest, the Sabbath School Celebration at Barree Forge, on the 3d inst., and feel disposed to say something in relation to it.

The place is a very beautiful and romantic grove, on the Forge premises, on the banks of the "Blue Juniata." In this grove stands the school house, (used also as a church) and in full view of the mansion house of the proprietor, and cottages of the workmen, and skirted on the South by the Pennsylvania Railroad and Barree Station, all as convenient as "snuff in a rag."

The school was under the superintendency of William Tomlison, assisted by many competent teachers. At  $9\frac{1}{2}$  A. M., the school formed in procession, and, with appropriate banners, (furnished from the office of the Globe,) neatly and tastefully trimmed in frames by the gifted ladies of Barree, marched to the place in the grove prepared for their reception. Here were seats comfortably arranged, and a rostrum for speakers, fancifully festooned with evergreens. The procession marched to vocal music-well selected hymns, sang with power and pathosbanners borne by young men selected for the occasion-on either side of whom, were two young girls, holding the cords and tassels of the banners, dressed chastely and tastefully, representing "cherubs." The sight was really pleasing and imposing, and impressed the mind with pleasing anticipations of the round the "selected spot," and were seated, Gen. S. Miles Green was called upon to preside over the subsequent proceedings.

On taking the stand, the President called all to order, and earnestly imposed upon the school, teachers, and all present, the great importance of strict order and attention, with many pleasant commendatory remarks on the neat and attractive appearance of the school, and that they would hear many good things from the several speakers, which would please them more, and be an invaluable blessing hereafter. A hymn was sung, and prayer by the Rev. Mr. Christ, of the Lutheran Church-very eloquent and appropriate. When two speeches were delivered—one by Master Josiah, and one by Master Owen Hicks-teachers of the school-the first on temperance, the next on the duties of teachers and of pupils, and of parents generally, in relation to the importance of Sabbath Schools. Hymn, by the assembly. An address by the Rev. Mr. Creighton, of Altoona, of the M. E. Church. The speech was elequently declined—impressive and solemn in its diction. Hymn by the company.

It being now noon, the school was dismissed—the children taken to a table heavily and bountifully laden with "eatable and drinkable" viands, good to "look upon," but far better to eat—as was made manifest by the inroads made upon them by "Young America." When the youths had replenished their stomachs, a new supply made its appearance, then "Old America" gave evidence of what its valour was, in making an attack on such a "formidable rampart," and true to the blood of their Sires, they soon made it "topple over."

After an hour or two spent in rambling and sporting, and having a" high old time," formation of something which portends a fore the rostrum. All being seated and composed, a hymn was sung, and the Rev. Father Christ made a very beautiful and feeling address, and appeal to parents, teachers, scholfriends, who will certainly be caught without ars, and all present. He has been long in the service, and well calculated to address Sabbath Schools. Hymn sung. Rev Mr. Still, of the Baptist Church, made the concluding speech-tales of interest and instruction, and warmly received by the audience. Indeed, all the services were truly appropriate, and, I have no doubt, will long be remembered by all present. The assemblage was large, as many visitors were from the surrounding country—some from Centre county, Spruce Creek, &c.
