We cut the following method of cu ring meat from the York Tribunc of the 14th inst. The suggestions are new to this county, and worthy the consideration of our farmers. The doubt it will answer the purpose. If sugar will cure hams why should not molasses effect the same purpose? The Tribune says upon the subject : "Sugarcured hams" have long been in fashion in this country. They are moderately salted, and sugar or molasses added to assist in their preservation. In France, all sorts of fresh meat have been preserved by molasses alone. An in the most perfect manner, and with the following important advantages: It has an agreeable flavor, it produces no scurvy or other disorders which result from the use of salt food, and it may be prepared at a moderate price. The process consists simply in cutting the meat into pieces of moderate size and dropping them into molasses, such as is obtained from the sugar manufactories or refineries. By a natural process of osmose the lighter juices of the meat pass out, and the heavier molasses penetrates inward to every part of the meat. When the external molasses has acquired a certain degree of liquidity from the mixture of the juices of the meat, it is a sure sign that the meat is thoroughly impregnated. It is now taken out of the molasses, thoroughly washed, and hung in a current of air to dry. After it is completely dry, it's may be packed in boxes, and sent all over the world without experiencing any change whatever.

CAN'T COOK.

It is a sad defect when young ladies are incapable of directing their own servants-shoes without soles or waistbands without a shirt are not more useless than one of these. One day, shortly after his marriage, a young merchant went home, and seeing no dinner ready, and his wife's appearance anxious and confused, asked: "What's the matter?"

. "Nancy went off at ten o'clock this morning," replied the wife, "and the chamber-maid knows no more about cooking than the man in the moon." "Couldn't she have done it under your directions?" inquired her husband very coolly. "Under my directions? I should like to see a dinner cooked under my directions."

"Why?" asked the husband in surprise, "you do not mean to say that you cannot cook a dinner?" "I certainly do," replied the wife;

"how should I know anything about cooking?"

The husband was silent, but his look of astonishment perplexed and worried his wife. "You look very much surprised," she said, after a moment or two had elapsed.

"And so I am," he answered; "as much surprised as I should be at finding the captain or one of my ships unacquainted with navigation. You don't know how to cook, and the mistress of a family! Jane if there is a cooking school anywhere in the city, go to it, and complete your education for it is sadly deficient in a very important particular."

CATCHING RATS.

A professional rat-catcher, says the A professional rat-catcher, says the Homestead, would certainly make a profitable business in this country.—
These people are frequently met with in England and on the continent.—
They will divest premises of rats, fill up the holes with broken glass and mortar, and do it in a very short time. They carry ferrets to go through the runs and into their holes, with traps set at their holes, catch the rats as they are driven out, and with terrier dogs those that escape are overtaken.

Thus a barn, granery or house, is freed of rats, and a good, honest ratcatcher will leave it so that they will not come back for a long time. Stories are told of enterprising business men of this profession, who would create a want for their services, sending forward the rats caught in one village, in good condition, to stock another not far off. This has led to heavy fines being imposed upon any of this craft found with live rats in their possession. We believe, also, it is not an uncommon practice for contracts to be entered into, whereby for a certain course of years, a rat-catcher agrees to keep certain premises free from rats for a consideration. We are indebted to those rat-catchers for so much of the "kid" of which kid gloves are made. Country bred, corn-fed rats have probably better hides than the city-sewer dinizens of Paris.

MOCK TERRAPIN.

A correspondent of the Government Telegraph, furnishes the following reipe for making Mock Terrapin :

"I have for some years had a dish prepared in my family, which I never met with but once anywhere else, and many think it quite equal to genuine terrapin. I do not, of course-but recipe is a simple one, and we have no | many, I say, do. It is the best way to cook a chicken of which I have any knowledge; and if once tried, it will be preferred by most persons." It is

"Boil the chicken-and no chicken should ever be cooked in any way over one year old-until the meat is pretty tender; then cut up in small pieces, say about the same size we would a terrapin, removing all the large bones article in L'Invention asserts that meat | and rough parts, but especially retainmay be preserved by molasses alone ing the wings and "drumsticks."-Then put in a stew pot, and dress precisely as for a terrapin, viz: butter, salt, cayenne pepper, cream, a little flour, the yolk of an egg well beaten, and some powdered sugar. Just before serving add one or two glasses Maderia wine, to stit the taste."

"This is a new dish, and when a chicken fixen" is desired for company or otherwise, it is exceedingly handy and very nice."

PATTYPAN.

GRAPE VINES.

A fruit so hardy, so sure, and requiring so little cultivation and expense, surely not a homestead in our land need be without this luxury .-Let there be an arbor in every man's yard, and when the season comes it will seldom fail to be loaded with the most delicious fruit. There is a cheap way to do this, within the reach of every man: First, select a place in your yard where you want your arbor, and then dig a trench about one and a half feet deep and two feet wide, and fill with good rich dirt. Second, go around to your neighbors who have choice selections of grapes-none will refuse to give you a few slips-they will be glad to see your enterprise, and will say that it is a move in the right direction. If they are men of ome experience in the business, it would be well to ask for advice how to proceed. Plant your slips in the ground in a slanting position, one bud out and another just under the surface of the earth. There should be at least two more in the ground. Follow the above directions, reader, and in a few years you will have grape vines by the dozen and grapes by the bushel.

SCRATCHES ON HORSES .- Wash their feet and legs clean, and when dry, paint them with white lead. One or two dressings only will be needed.

COMMENDATIONS:
From Hon. Lewis D. Campbell, M. C., Ohio.
My family and friends all concur in the opinion that the (Nowell) picture is more life-like than any thing they ever saw. My likeness has been repeatedly taken by different Artists in various ways, but I have nover yet had one which presents so true to nature, all the features and expressions of countenance as this. From Hon. E. Joy Morris, late Minister to Italy,

The exquisite finish, beauty and softness of your por-traits, conjoined with their durability of color and faith-fulness as likenesses, cannot fail to commend them to the attention and patronage of all who appreciate true art. From Col. James Page.

From Col. James Page.

Having occasion for a portrait, I procured one from Mr. Robert Newell, of the city of Philadelphia, a miniature in Oil Colors, under the new process discovered by ham, and take great pleasure in expressing the satisfaction given me, not only by the accuracy of the likeness, but its artistic finish in all respects, and recommends him to the paternage of the likeness but first artistic finish in all respects, and recommends him to the paternage of those disposed to encourage the beautiful art.
