

REPORTED FOR "THE GLOBE," BY OUR REPORTER.

Death of a Soldier.

Mr. Edward Churry, a private in Capt. David Jones' company of Tyron Infantry, departed this life at the Exchange Hotel, in this place, on Sunday morning last, at 4 o'clock. Some three or four weeks ago he was prostrated by typhoid fever, contracted in camp, where he lay for five or six days, when he was brought to the Hotel, and lingered on until Sunday morning. He resided when at home, at our Bell's Mills, Blair co. He was about 20 years old, and was loved and respected alike by friends and his companions in arms. His company, in command of Lieutenants Holliday and Hopkins, marched into town from Camp Crossman on Sunday afternoon, and in marching to pay their respects to the deceased body. Having reached the hotel, they stacked arms and in single file, marched to the chamber of their dead comrade, to take a last lingering look at one who but a short time since, was hale and hearty, and enjoying all the realities of a soldier's life with them. We happened to be present when some of the soldiers entered the room to gaze upon him for the last time, and we noticed a tear trickle down the sun-burnt face of one of the men, as he approached the bedside, but he hurriedly brushed it away, and left the room with a sad and heavy heart. The deceased was taken to Altoona, accompanied by a squad of men, on Monday morning, where he was buried with all the honors of war.

How sad, and yet how inspiring was the scene when his comrades marched into town with the drum and fifing peeling forth a solemn dirge, their arms reversed, and the badge of mourning worn on their right arm. We saw that all was sad, yet inspiring. A young man was dead, who had left home, and parents, and all else that was near and dear to him, to help save his country. He had sacrificed all the comforts of home to fight the battles for the Union, but ere he was allowed to face the enemy in mortal combat he was called from earth to that "bourn from whence no traveler ever yet returned." We gazed intently for a time at the inanimate body as it lay dressed in full uniform, and what thoughts crowded our mind. We knew it was our duty to chronicle his death and we thought of what we would say and how we would say it, but nothing we could think of was high or noble enough to place on record, in memory of the deceased; however, we mentally exclaimed: "Peace be to his ashes," and concluded that that sentence was the most fitting one which we could pronounce for the brave man who lay cold and still in death.

His old father sat weeping in one corner of the room, which added still more solemnity to the scene. That old man wept as though his heart would break at his misfortune, in losing his dear boy. It was a sad moment of our life, and one that we will long remember.

An evensong of "Globe"—The "ex-reporter" down that way again, my boy, and we would advise you, in the meantime, to prepare yourself with pistols (cocked species) and coffee for two. Don't forget—H. S. Standard.

Come on. We'll immortalize ourselves then, won't we? We'll get our names in the papers, in large letters. The announcement will appear that the editor of the "Gay and Inscrutable" was "shot in the neck," in an affair of honor with the spirited reporter of the gayest of the gay. Then, you know, to do the thing up right, we will have to leave for Canada or "Tussey's" mountain. That will be nice. Yes, sir, come on by all means, and let us fight it out with your weapons. We'll not do things by halves. No, sir—We have the weapons engaged for the occasion. You must remember, however, that we can hit a bull's eye at twelve hundred yards every clip, but you needn't back out on that account.

"I'm for the Union still." While passing along Washington street the other evening, and when just opposite the "calaboose," we heard the voice of some one, but we could not make out for a moment, when the sound came from, as we could see no one about, so we stopped to listen, and directly the jolly fellow broke out in a new strain, singing very leisurely, "I'm for the Union, Union, I'm for the Union still."

It appears that the poor fellow had been unfortunate enough to get into the above named institution, and in a merry mood was whiffing away the time by asserting his devotion to the Union, although he was in "durance vile." We will bet an old "nickel" we have been carrying in our pocket for a month, (the only change we have had) that that fellow will never turn "seeds" as long as he is as good humored as he appeared to be when he was declaring himself to be in favor of the Union still, while in the lock-up, for if anything will make a man cross, it is when he gets into a place of that kind. Another thing, you will generally find the accessories to be a stupid, crabbed, crusty set of people, always in a bad humor at themselves and everybody else, and everything is always going wrong for them.

Mrs. Ellen Murray, formerly Miss Drayton, of this place, died near Washington city on the 16th inst.
