HUNTINGDON, PA. Thursday afternoon, May 1, 1862.

Our Flag Forever.

NOTICE. We have not the time nor the inclination, to do personally, a large number of persons who have unsettled accounts upon our books of several years standing.

THE MISERABLE miscreant and traitor, John Bankhead Magruder, Major General Commanding the Rebel forces at Yorktown, has issued an address to his soldiers, in the opening paragraph of which, for base falsehoods and Southern bombast, is scarcely equalled.

IN reading the extract, "it is almost impossible to realize that Magruder is the same man who, a little more than a year ago, was parading the streets of Washington boasting of his loyalty and swearing that he never would leave the old flag." Pampered and spoiled by Executive favors, he was first permitted to revel at the expense of the Government in foreign countries, and afterward placed in command of the barracks at Newport, Rhode Island, where he lived in a style of princely luxury.

DESERTERS.—Col. Crocker and Maj. Cassidy, belonging to a New York Regiment, went over to the enemy at Yorktown the other day. If there is any one place in hell, hotter than deserts to go there, men certainly deserve to go there, who will enlist in the defence of their country, win the confidence of the officers and men, then desert, go over to the enemy and divulge the secrets of those they have deceived.

THE ARREST OF GEN STONE.—The President transmitted a message to the Senate on Tuesday, in reference to a resolution to the effect that Gen. Stone was arrested at his instance, and by his order, and he should have as speedy a trial as was consistent with the public interest, but that the exigencies of the service are such that neither officers to form, or witnesses to attend a court martial, could at present be spared from the field.

ANOTHER HUNTINGDON COUNTY BOY IN THE PITTSBURG BATTLE.—Lieutenant Frank M. Boggs, son of James Boggs, formerly of this county, was shot through the thigh at the battle of Pittsburg Landing. He lay forty-eight hours on the field before found. When last heard from, eight days afterward, he was still living. Poor Frank! Our (Junior's) regret for him is unfeigned. Little did we think, while school-mates at the "Union School House" on the "Ridges," that we should be called upon so soon to chronicle this sad misfortune.

MARCHING ALONG. The children are gathering from near and from far, The trumpet is sounding the call for war, The conflict is raging, 'till 'till we are all here, We'll hold on our arms, and be marching along.

Gen. BUELL'S STRATEGY.—A soldier who was on the battlefield at Shiloh, states that Gen. Buell executed a manoeuvre that reflects great credit on him as a commander. The rebels were advancing in great force to turn our left and capture our transports and supplies, when Buell, becoming aware of their intentions, made preparations to receive them. About half a mile above the landing, he ordered his brigades running back from the river. The ridge next to the landing is the highest. Buell placed a battery on each of the ridges, and between them he placed a brigade of infantry. The troops were ordered to lie down. He then ordered the lower battery to fire into the enemy and make a show of retreat in confusion, so as to draw the rebels on. On came the rebels pell-mell, yelling at the top of their voices, "Bull Run," "Bull Run," thinking to frighten us. As soon as the rebels came in range, the lower battery, agreeably to orders, opened fire, retreated and took position in the rear of the upper battery. The rebels, seeing our men retreating, charged up the hill and took possession of the battery. The rebels in the meantime were not aware of our troops being in the hollow below them. At this moment the signal was sounded, and the whole brigade rose to their feet and poured a deadly fire of rifle balls into the ranks of the rebels, cutting them down by scores. At this favorable moment, also, the upper battery poured in a perfect storm of grape and canister shot. The rebels reeled and staggered like drunken men, and at last broke and fled in every direction, leaving the ground strewn with dead and dying.

The Report about Gen. W. F. Smith. Mr. Morrill, of the House, has been visited upon by officers of the army, who say the Division Commander, Gen. Smith, at the time he was charged with being drunk, and sacrificing the lives of some of the Vermont troops, who charged one of the rebel works at Yorktown, and informed him that he (Morrill) was misled in asserting that the General (Smith) who directed the movement of the Vermont troops was drunk, and, in consequence of being so, fell from his horse twice. One of the officers, a Colonel on Gen. McClellan's staff, assured Mr. Morrill that he saw Gen. Smith before and after the reconnaissance, and that he was perfectly sober; but that his horse did fall, throwing the General, injuring his head, and he was seriously wounded. Mr. Morrill acknowledged that he was mistaken, and that injustice had been done to Gen. Smith.—N. Y. Times.

A HEAVY DUTY.—A little boy, only twelve years old, whose mother resides in Woburn, returned last week from Pittsburg Landing. He was a drummer in a company of which his father was a lieutenant. His name is Charles Bliss. I am well acquainted with the family, having been their physician, and this boy went through the whole of the Donelson fight, and was engaged during the two days of that battle. His father was wounded in three places, whilst he had his clothes pierced with bullets, and blood oozing from about the head. The little fellow was shot entirely away! The little fellow's gear looked very rusty, and his girths were stained as dark as chocolate. His colonel sent him home, with four wounds, by whom he had remained, and to whom he carried water on the field when the battle raged the hottest. They say he never finished. As Donelson he got hold of a gun dropped by a rebel, and fired twenty rounds himself. Mr. Morrill acknowledged that he was mistaken, and that injustice had been done to Gen. Smith.—N. Y. Times.

A SPOUSE.—On Wednesday last, as Lieut. Van Arman, of the Fifty-eighth Illinois, was passing near the Post Office, he was accosted by a youthful woman, who said, seeing the figure "58" on his hat, she hoped he might be able to tell her who she could get a letter to an officer in that regiment. He said he would be happy to oblige her if he could. She said she had written several letters and received no answer. "What is the name?" inquired Lieut. Van Arman. "Lieut. Fife," answered the lady. "I am sorry to say that Lieut. Fife is dead; he was killed at Pittsburg," said Van Arman. The effect was terrible. Almost instantly the lady sank to the ground, fainting. When restored her grief was most distressing. Lieut. Fife was her husband. But, unfortunately, the sad badge of sorrow was not all that she had to bear. Her husband was Captain Keith, of Company F, Fifty-eighth Regiment, and her husband's second Lieutenant of the same regiment. Her husband is now a prisoner, with the most of his regiment, in the hands of the rebels, and her name was wounded severely in the engagement. It is rarely that such a concentration of misfortune falls upon a single family.—Chicago Journal.

THE DEFENCE OF RICHMOND.—General Gaspar Smith commands the army defending Richmond on the Fredericksburg side, which includes Wigfall's brigade. Smith has lately received heavy reinforcements, troops having returned who were sent to Yorktown weeks ago. This report is confirmed by contrabands and deserters.
