

TERMS OF THE GLOBE. For copies in advance... 30 cents per copy. For copies on account... 10 cents per copy. For copies on subscription... 10 cents per copy.

The GLOBE. HUNTINGDON, PA., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1862. VOL. XVIII. NO. 20. TERMS, $1.50 a year in advance.

THE GLOBE JOB PRINTING OFFICE. THE "GLOBE JOB OFFICE" is the most complete of any in the country... HAND BILLS, PROGRAMMES, BLANKS, POSTERS, CARDS, CHICULARS, BALL TICKETS, BILL HEADS, LABELS, &c., &c.

The Globe. HUNTINGDON, PA. Friday, October 17, 1862.

NOTICE.

We have not the time nor the inclination to do personally a large number of persons who have unsettled accounts upon our books of several years standing. We shall, therefore, from day to day, without respect to persons, place into the hands of a Justice for collection; all accounts of over two years standing. All those who wish to save expense, will do well to give us a call.

A LECTURE On the Crisis of the Nation.

DELAVERED BY JOHN G. MILES, ESQ., Before the Citizens of Huntingdon, ON SATURDAY, OCT. 4, 1862.

[CONTINUED.]

THE EVIDENCE OF THE CONSPIRACY. Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Southern institutions, in which Mr. Calhoun said to him, "That were essentially aristocratic I cannot deny, but we can and do yield much to democracy. This is our social policy. We are from necessity thrown upon and solemnly wedded to that party, however it may occasionally clash with our feelings for the conservation of our interests. It is through our connection with that party in the Atlantic and Western States that we hold power; but when we cease to control this nation through a despotic democracy, or a majority, we shall be reduced to a mere party, and that party which shall stand to throw us out of that rule and control, we shall then resort to the dissolution of the Union. The compromises of the constitution under the circumstances, were sufficient for our fathers; but under the altered condition of our country from that period, leave the South no room for dissent; for the amendments to the Constitution could be reached through a convention of the people under their three-fourths rule." Here Mr. Calhoun declares two things of the South (indeed three) which afford a key to the long series of subsequent acts done by himself and the disciples of his school in reference to the relations between the North and the South. 1st, That the Southern people were aristocratic in their feelings and habits. 2d, That they would consent to remain in the Union so long as they could rule the nation through a despotic democracy, or a majority.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

of slave labor must be the sufferers, and must, from necessity, be in a state of dependence upon the results of free labor abroad. The present rebellion has illustrated this in the fact that the buttons with which the uniforms of its officers are ornamented, and the badges they wear have to be procured from abroad. How, we would then be the results of free and slave labor? Whilst the one system advances the other retards, in all the business of life. This is proved by all the statistics of the commerce of the States. Take those of New York and Virginia as examples. In 1790 New York contained 440,120 inhabitants. At the same time the population of Virginia was 748,908, less than twice that of New York. In 1850 New York had a population of 3,907,394. At the same time the population of Virginia was only 1,421,661, less than half the number of that of New York. In 1793 the exports of New York amounted to $2,505,465; the exports of Virginia to $5,130,863; the exports of New York were only 1/2, less than half the number of that of New York. In 1793 the exports of New York amounted to $2,505,465; the exports of Virginia to $5,130,863; the exports of New York were only 1/2, less than half the number of that of New York.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

ditionally was to be decided by the Supreme Court. I have shown the wicked design conceived—the cunning means adopted to carry it up in the disguises of popular political doctrine—the doctrines which were to be operative upon the popular heart at the South—to prepare for the plunge to be made whenever circumstances should favor the enterprise. I have also shown the notice governing the purpose, that is to say, a conviction on the part of the conspirators that with the abolition of slavery, they could not compete with the enterprise of the North under its system of free labor—this determination not to give up slavery because the system was so congenial to their aristocratic instincts and tastes, and their consequent purpose to under a government based upon slavery, unaltered with any change of its political principles, to maintain the system of slavery. We are now prepared to witness an open demonstration of their treasonable purpose. I have stated that the conspiracy was organized in the Democratic party in the election of Mr. Adams. It happened when the treason was to be consummated. The measure was proposed during the term of his Presidency—the Hague and Webster debate announced the principle (a Democratic principle) upon which it was to be justified, and then in 1832 we have the act itself—the act of a sovereign State in Convention assembled, adopting an ordinance declaring her purpose to resist the laws of the United States, and the 20th May, 1828, and the 14th July, 1832. It declared that the people of South Carolina will maintain the said Ordinance at every hazard, and will consider the passage of any act of Congress on closing the ports of the said State, or otherwise obstructing the free import or export of vessels to and from the said ports, or any other act of the Federal Government to coerce the State, shut up her ports, destroy or harass her commerce, or to deprive her of the rights of citizenship, as inconsistent with the longer continuance of South Carolina in the Union, and that she will therefore forthwith secede from the said Union, and will maintain her independence, and do all other acts and things which sovereign and independent States may of right do. In this language she declared her purpose to resist the laws of the United States, and to do all other acts and things which sovereign and independent States may of right do.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

was so rapidly advancing under one system and they making no progress under the other. They saw that to keep pace with it slavery must be abandoned, and their aristocracy fell with it, and their aristocracy saw in such an alternative their ambition led them to desire the blessings of a Government based entirely upon slavery, where there would be no conflicting elements of progress or its opposite. Political economists to speculate upon. A great Southern Confederacy, was the cherished object of their hopes. To accomplish this, the areas of slavery must be extended upon any ground upon which the ingenuity or sophistry of its advocates could place its claims. The Southern mind had to be schooled and educated in the theory of the conspirators, as to the nature of the relations existing between the State and National Government. The Southern mind had to be schooled and educated in the theory of the conspirators, as to the nature of the relations existing between the State and National Government.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.

Mr. Calhoun was the leading spirit in it, and the master-mind employed in the intention of means through which regular approaches to the desired end were to be made. It was a South Carolinian who had been educated in the sciences and opinions which characterized the people of the restless little State.