Whither are we Drifting.

There is no use to attempt to disguise the fact that there are tokens abroad of a mischievous political spirit. The late elections furnished corrupt, traitorous and unprincipled men with a desired opportunity, and they little children. I have lost the right rupt, traitorous and unprincipled men salute. The sight is solemn but impo-with a desired opportunity, and they to utter sentiments which are well calculated to divide the loyal people, to give "aid and comfort" to the encmics of the country, and to embarrass the Administration in its honest efforts to quell the rebellion-sentiments, which, a year or eighteen months since, would have brought those who uttered them to a short shrift, a sufficiently long rope and the nearest lamp post. Men who utter these senthe rebel surgeons refusing to give him attention, his left arm has become powutterers a year ago, and even now they would stand aghast, could they but see clearly the road along which they are drifting.

The plans of the Breckinridge trait ors among our people are slowly but gradually developing themselves; the next grand move will be an open anti-war party, and an attempt to carry the North over to its old Southern dictators, or the alternative of a divided and ruined country. We implore well meaning but misguided Democrats to pause before they lend them-selves to the infamous schemes of men who are reckless of consequences, so that they can accomplish their own selfish ends, whose protestations of loyalty have thus far been mere lipservice, and who, by long habit, natucharge and is home. "Resolved, 1. That we regard the Confiscation act and the President's emancipation proclamation as eminently just and constitutional measures, which should be sternly enforced.

"2. That we most solemnly protest

ngainst the recent proposition of a distinguished politician in this State, that this war should end with the capture of Richmond, and that the South should then be dismissed with the ben-ediction: 'Wayward sisters, depart in peace, as prejudicial to the interests of the country at large, and especially unjust and cruel toward the loyal men of the South, who have suffered so much for the Union.

"3. That any terms of compromise or peace, short of an unconditional surrender of the rebels to the authority of the United States, would be degrading to its sovereignty and destructive of the rights and liberties of all loyal citizens of the South.

"4. That the salvation of the Union depends upon a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the Stars and Stripes wave triumphantly from the Canadas to the Gulf, and from ocean to ocean.

"5. That we know no distinction between the Government and the Administration, and he, who, in time of war, refuses to support the one, is a traitor to the other Mr. Carter, of Tennessee, endorsed the Emancipation Proclamation, which they ordered to come to a halt. and thus spoke of the Northern politicians and editors who are always horses in the procession, and amongst talking about the rights of the South them the horse attached to the hearse. being injured by the Government: "I want these editors and these con-

thom? Did you ever hear them? | corts demanded to know by whose or Did you ever taste them? Did you ever smell them? [Laughter.] If any of these Northern men have found any of my lost rights, I hope he will re-turn them. I am conscious of having lost rights, not through my Government, but through this accursed Southright to be in my own country a free-man. [A voice—' We will restore it.'] I will tell you how to give me back those rights. Crush the accursed rebellion against the Government.—Send the exile back to his home, his wife and children. In a word, re-establish the Star Spangled banner over every town and city and hamlet in this broad land. Thus only can you give back to the Southern people their lost and priceless rights.'

Mr. Boynton, of Florida, in a very pithy address, said:

"The shortest way to the end of the matter is through and over the rebellion. Circuitous paths end in bogs and quagmires. A good rule for voting, is for the man the robels hate the worst.' The difference between a rebel and an anti-coercionist, or a conventionalist, is not measurable.— Things which are equal to the same thing are equal to each other. [Applause.] It is hardly too much to say of the man who opposed or opposes co-ercion: 'The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.' 'To him who in the love of treason holds communion with her visible forms, she speaks a voracious language.' Sometimes we find her in open arms against authority-her least dishonorable shape; sometimes in the pulpit; too often under the cloak of the man who smiles and smiles and is a villain, and talks of compromises and conventions. [A voice-John Van Buren. | Courage will vanish from the hearts and strength from the arms which support the rebellion, just in proportion as they see that uncompromising Union men are supported and elected in the loyal section.

Again the eloquent Floridian observed: Just a word about the proclamaion. We accept it as the conclusion of the inscrutable, irrefragable and inexorable logic of events. [Applause.]
We would guard the Constitution, and to do so most effectually we would save the nation. Does not the spirit of the Constitution abide in the body of the nation? Do souls remain on earth after bodies are dead? Save the nation if you would save the Constitution. Has the President shown haste | tietam, and to see his good old native State again secur. to exercise doubtful powers? Did no not for a long time propose to do so if the robels would lay down their arms? Is it not lawful to save the nation at victor. And of the son, who barely two me this before the condition of the son, who barely two me this before the condition of the son, who barely two me this before the long and the son the long and the son the long and the son the long and the Constitution which can be tortur-ed into the intendment that rebel soldiers have a right to be supported by slaves or anybody else? If it is lawful to shoot rebels in the field, is it less so to kick from under them the prop which feeds and clothes them in the field? We look upon the proclamation as a military measure, not aimed but at the rebellion; and as such, just, necessary and lawful. There is nothbut at the rebollion; and as such, just, autro-of-him, and in death, a blessed martyr of liberty.—
