THE DYING SCOUT.

When the Autumn winds were mournfully sighing, With the notes of time hurrying by;
And old mother Earth receives on her bosom

And hearts that are sad, and ones that are weary,

Thro' the long hours of night by the lamp dunly l

Look not in the tent, you'll find him not there,

Oh rake up the wood, boys, build up the fire:

Nor around the camp-fire so bright; He is out in the storm, that young heart so warm,

All nature that blooms but to die.
