HUNTINGDON, P. A.

Wednesday morning, Oct. 14, 1863.

A GRAND UNION DEMONSTRATION AND DINNER.

We had the pleasure of being present at the great dinner given Captain March's company, at Mooresville, West township, on Wednesday last, the 7th inst. The dinner was prepared by the patriotic ladies of West, Barre and Jackson townships—and such a dinner—we got hungry every time we think of it. The like never was seen in the county, and we doubt whether it could be beat in any other county. The table was set with two hundred and fifty plates; it was surrounded by hungry men almost the third time, leaving enough of good things to feed all the hungry snakes in the three townships. The ladies, God bless them, were there in all their glory. The meeting was organized in the Academy building by calling GILBERT CHANEY, Esq., to the Chair, and appointing Jacob Smith, Thomas Wilson, Robt. Moore, John Moore, John Hewitt, Samuel Mosser, Henry Davis, Mitchell Anderson and John Laves, Esq., Vice Presidents; and T. P. Loe, Henry Neff, James Oaks and W. W. Davis, Secretaries. The meeting was ably and eloquently addressed by Rev. Moorehead, Rev. Patterson and S. T. Brown, Esq., when Capt. March's company, the officers of the meeting, and invited guests adjourned to dinner. But the meeting went on, and was next addressed by a stranger, a refugee from the South, who gave his lecture a good idea of what the bogus Confederacy was like. John Williamson, Esq., was the next speaker, and he made one of the most eloquent and apt speeches of the campaign, and in the conclusion of the meeting adjourned in perfect harmony with three cheers for the ladies, the speakers, and Andy G. Curtin. Those who were present at this outpouring of the patriotism of the surrounding country will not soon forget the good time they had. We know we will not soon forget the patriotic ladies and the man-of-war dinner. The like of it we want to hear of soon again, and we promise to be on hand, if only to see another evidence that the hearts of the people are full of the courage and the pure patriotism and love for the soldier that must have an influence in saving our country from being overrun by traitors and thieves. Snakes can't live long in the neighborhood of such a patriotic people.

A Boomer—Master Harry Landon Jacobs, on Monday last, presented us with a bouquet of very handsome dahlias, etc., for which he has our thanks.

Dan Rice's great show will be in town on Thursday the 22d, and everybody fond of fun will of course be on hand to see the sights.

The Baptists on the State of the Country. At the Philadelphia Baptist Association, which adjourned on Thursday evening the following resolutions, respecting the state of the country, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this association, comprising within its bounds nearly fifteen thousand members of the adult population of the local State of Pennsylvania, hereby reaffirm its previous declarations of loyalty to the Government and Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That in view of the exigencies of the republic, on account of the gigantic rebellion of a portion of its citizens against the integrity of the national life, it is the duty of all loyal citizens to display a readiness to make any and every sacrifice, of fortune, of property, of life, and of life itself, upon the altar of our country's good.

Resolved, That the development of events during the progress of this rebellion has confirmed all our previous convictions, that it has a metaphysical and origin in the necessities and demand of the slave power that, for so many years, controlled the affairs of the nation.

Resolved, That we are still further convinced that the institution of slavery, in this nation, is an abomination to the body politic, and that since the great object of the Government, in its resort to arms, is the perpetuity and glory of our national being, it is a necessity forced upon the Government to conduct the war with a view to the eradication of this evil from every form of the national life.

Resolved, That in our judgment the recent successes of the national arms and the present waning proportions of the rebellion are practical endorsements of God upon those measures which the Government has already adopted for the suppression of the rebellion.

Resolved, That it is the duty of all Christian patriots to uphold the hands of the Government in the present crisis of affairs by their prayers, their services, and their votes.

Resolved, That with gratitude to God we recognize the fact that the Constitution of the United States of America, as it is, is adapted to the enfranchisement of all men, and that when men in this nation shall be free, the people of that day will need to look elsewhere than to the Constitution drawn by our fathers in order to learn that the stars of the Union over-arch upon the stripes of a slave.

Resolved, That the universal prevalence of freedom in this country will be the climax of that series of events in our history which indicate that God has appointed this nation to be the fastidious and model of the world's civilization.

Moderate Views in Georgia.

Hon. Joshua Hill, who is now a candidate for Governor in Georgia in opposition to Governor Brown, has written a campaign letter expressing his views, from which we take the following extracts, giving the opinions of one who belongs to the moderate party at the South, and who is suspected by the violent Secessionists of Union proclivities:

"Since my resignation of my seat as a member of the Congress of the United States, which occurred immediately upon the withdrawal of my colleagues, I have taken no active part in politics. I had often expressed my honest convictions, that the destruction of the Union would be followed by a long and bloody war, disastrous beyond precedent in its results to every section; and that the idea of dissolving the Union with the hope of reconstructing it on a basis more permanent and protective of the rights of the Southern States, was fallacious and absurd. I compared the effort to accomplish such an impossibility, to the folly of taking the most delicate glass and crushing it to atoms in the vain hope of collecting the scattered fragments, and, by reuniting them, making the shattered vessel more complete and stronger than it was before. It was a strange delusion, without which the Union could not have been broken. I believed what I said of the impossibility of reconstruction. Time and events have deepened these convictions.

"I felt little comfort in the flippant assurances of sanguine orators, that the Yankees could not fight if they would, and would not if they could. I knew the time was when they had fought, and I believed that, by collision with our brave troops, they would learn to do it again. In war, as in politics, it is unwise to underrate your adversary.

"The war, with all its afflictive train of suffering, privation and death, has served to eradicate all idea of reconstruction, even with those who made the basis of their arguments the necessity of disunion. I always regarded it as impossible, except by the success of the Northern arms, and then only the Union in name, and not the free Government of our fathers. I want no such Union as that, and will not accept it. The best argument in favor of disunion, and the one most relied on by its advocates, was apprehension for the security of our slave property. If it was not then in danger, it is in extreme peril now.

"Occupying the position I did, I did not think it becoming me to attempt in their efforts to stimulate the youth of the country to violence. I made no inflammatory appeals to their patriotism, but I denied them not my aid, and my sympathy in their trying adventures. I was impressed with the conviction that the South had no power of words, and since I declined to urge others to do what I failed to do myself."

Benevolent History of a Soldier Woman.

Mrs. Frances Louisa Clayton called at the provost marshal's office in this city, on Thursday, with letters from officers, to procure a pass to her home in Minnesota. Mrs. Clayton enlisted as a private, with her husband, in a Minnesota regiment some two years since. She was in Rosecrans' army, and did full duty as a soldier for nearly a year before her sex was discovered.

While in the army, the letter to conceal her sex, she learned to drink, smoke, chew, and swear with the best of worst of the soldiers. She stood guard, went on picket duty in rain and storm, and fought on the field with the rest, and was considered a good fighting man.

On recovering sufficiently to travel, she was discharged on the 3d of January last, and sent North. On the way between Nashville and Louisville, a guerrilla party attacked the train, and robbed her of her papers, money, &c. After reaching home and recovering from her wounds, Mrs. Clayton started for the army again, to recover the papers belonging to her husband; but was turned back at Louisville and ordered home. By mistake her pass carried her to Kalamazoo instead of Chicago, and she was compelled to apply to the provost marshal there, who sent her through this way.

Hunting Conscripts and Fugitives with Bloodhounds.

A friend last week—a refugee from Atala county, Mississippi—obliged us with some of his experience of the past year in Central Mississippi. Will be credited that, in this nineteenth century, in a country where, three years ago, people were free, such crimes can be perpetrated under the name of the law, and yet the indignation of the civilized world would not be heaped upon the government that sanctions them? Yet the statements come from men whose honor is unimpeachable, whose word has never been broken, whose faithful oaths are registered in heaven. The enforcement of the odious, accursed, three-hundred-and-fifty-mile law is the prolific source of all these horrors. A scoundrelly styled Lieutenant Davis, a recruiting officer for Bragg's division, is at the head of forty cavalry, part of a large detached detachment, detached for the same purpose of harassing the county of Atala and contiguous counties, and hunting down the unfortunate subjects of the conscript law with bloodhounds—usually with bloodhounds. Our informant had a nephew who was conscripted. Upon attempting to escape he was pursued and captured by the pack of bloodhounds. An incident relating to the use of dogs occurred in Atala county. A lady whose husband and son were in the army, was carrying some bread upon a scaffold when she heard the baying of a pack of hounds. Determined to have her revenge, even though she should lose her life, she applied strychnine over the dogs came up. Their owners threw over the scaffold that the dogs might feed. Thirteen of them died on the spot. The riders in their wrath, ordered the woman's house and property, and left her there with the dead dogs.

The conscript who are hiding in the swamps of Four rivers and the swamps of the remaining negroes, in putting spirits of turpentine, onions, and pepper, etc., in their shoes to conceal the scent from the dogs.

An Extraordinary correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes from Corinth, October 1st: A feat was lately accomplished by some Union Alabama soldiers, which I think has not been excelled during the war. It was the flight of Lieut. Tramel and ten men of the 1st Alabama Federal Cavalry started on foot from Glendale, some ten miles from here, where the regiment is stationed, and proceeded into the center of Alabama, and after an absence of two weeks they reached camp in safety, bringing with them one hundred and ten recruits for their regiment, as well as five prisoners—one a lieutenant and four privates.

The lieutenant captured was engaged in conscripting, and says he thinks that the Confederacy is about played out, if ten men can travel all through.
