

The Globe.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

Wednesday morning, March 16, 1865.

LOCAL & PERSONAL.

Those of our subscribers receiving bills will please give them immediate attention. Our terms are now advanced payments—our friends will remember this. Those receiving a paper marked with a † before the name will understand that the time for which they subscribed is up. If they wish the paper continued they will renew their subscription through the mail or otherwise.

Scratchings.—Captain Lloyd says that any man volunteering after he has been drafted, will be considered a deserter, and treated as such.

Lieut. Geo. C. Wilson, for several months a prisoner in the hands of "our Southern brethren" has had the good luck of getting home again, looking right well.

The boys have resumed their accustomed sport for this season—playing marbles. At almost every corner can be heard the expressions made use of by them at this game, and they are strange enough.

"A Lady" of West could have her letter published if she would give us her name. Some of the ladies named might take offense, and we are not willing to take the responsibility.

The petroleum recently discovered in Somerset county is proved upon analysis to be of superior quality. Who knows but the oil yet to be discovered in this county may be still better.

A religious revival has been and is still in progress in the Lutheran church of this place. Great interest and gratifying success is manifested in the nightly meetings.

To-morrow (Wednesday) is the day when the period of volunteer enlistment expires. As the war fever has about "played" in this district, the draft is inevitable.

In our last number we published the names of the teachers elected for the coming term, which term commences on Monday, the 3d day of April next. The juveniles have thus almost a month's vacation for the present.

We have been asked whether the warm weather would bring the "cops" around again. As to snakes them, we do not think it may, but the late triumphs of our cause may tend to keep the other man-snakes quiet. We can hear from them in the times of defeat and gloom.

It may, probably, not be generally known that on wine made of grapes a duty of five cents per gallon must be paid. The penalty for selling or offering for sale wine thus made, whereon the duty has not been paid, is one hundred dollars fine, and imprisonment.

In another place it will be found a muster roll of Co. C, 195th P. V. It will thus be seen that old Huntingdon is honored by its soldiers being in the color company of the regiment. The colors are in good hands; Huntingdon will not prove recreant. We published the names of the field officers of the Regiment in a late number.

David Over, Esq., latterly editor of the Bedford Patriot, has purchased the Lewistown Gazette office for the sum of $2,000. Mr. George Frynsinger, editor, and proprietor of the latter establishment retires from his capacity, having performed his labors satisfactorily, and securing for his paper a notable reputation. Mr. O. has our best wishes for success in this undertaking.

Since the maple sugar-making season has arrived, we suppose our farmers will seize "time by the forelock," and commence early. There are good prospects for an abundant supply of sugar and molasses; the latter product, we learn, was extensively manufactured in this and neighboring counties last year, and greatly to the profit of the manufacturers. The molasses is preferred to that sold in stores.

One of our enterprising capitalists we learn has made an extensive oil "crisis" of a $10,000 "strike." Such figures so rapidly accumulated lead others to think that there must be something in oil speculations. "All is not gold that glitters" neither is all oil that flows, and no doubt the gentleman in question had many a "rub" and many a "bore" before the sum was realized. We bid him further success, and hope that his endeavors will soon be turned nearer home, upon our own oil, under our own soil.

We have seen a few of our soldier boys from this place and vicinity who have returned from captivity in southern pens. One of them, Burns Codor, who was paroled, has returned home in this place. He states that he was captured at the battle of the Wilderness, and has been confined at Andersonville, Ga., for seven months. His daily rations consisted of a pint of corn meal, and some water. This, of course, lessened his weight considerably, though he is now regaining it rapidly. He says that the representations of the newspapers in regard to the treatment of our men in the rebel pens do not convey the full idea of our soldiers' condition. Codor has received his discharge, having served his country (together with the rebels by compulsion,) for three years.

An Outrage.

Two weeks ago, the Monitor published an article under the head of "A 'Loyal' Outrage," in which the editor done some of the parties taking part in the affair great injustice. We give the following statement, by an eyewitness, as the truth:

On Monday, the 20th ult., two drunken men who called themselves soldiers, went to Wilsonstown, West tp., in the hack from Petersburg. They went into the hotel at the former place, called for whiskey, and after drinking offered bogus money for pay to the barkeeper and also to Lewis Helfright, the hackdriver. Both, of course, refused to take it, whereupon they told them to "go to h—l for their pay," and gave them nothing.

About the same time Jno. B. Frazier came to the hotel in a one-horse sled and tied his horse to a hitching post; these soldiers came out and loosed the horse with the intention of driving off. Mr. F. tied him again, and again they untied him, at the same time drawing a revolver and threatening to blow him through it he further resisted. After this occurred they told him they came to arrest him as a deserter, and that they would compel him to haul them wherever they wished to go. Without telling him where they were going they started towards Neff's Mill, (Mooresville,) when on the road they asked Mr. F. whether there were any more men in the neighborhood who had been drafted. Mr. John Miller, who was near them in a sleigh on his way home from Petersburg, was pointed out as being one. Miller, Frazier, drunken soldiers, and all, stopped at the store at Mooresville. Miller, in the meantime, learning that Frazier was in their custody, he told them to release him, (Frazier,) as he was a responsible and civil man—had been drafted but was honorably discharged, and was no deserter. They then at once asked Miller whether he was not a conscript, when he answered that it was none of their business. They then pitched at him and attempted to tie him and take him to Frazier's sled; in this they failed—Miller got loose and ran into the store very much excited and asked for a pistol or gun. He then went out and the ruffians again took hold of him. Mr. D. J. Walker, who was near, stepped in and tried to persuade them to desist, as they certainly had no right to arrest those men. They at once dropped Miller and caught hold of Walker, and were about to drag him to the sled, when Henry Neff came up and interfered in the citizens' behalf, asking them what authority they had to arrest those men, for he knew them both to have been discharged more than two months before, and that he was certain they had never been sent to take them.—They then let Walker go and made at Neff most furiously and attempted to tie him. He broke loose from them and looked round for a stone, but seeing none he asked for a hatchet; he then told Frazier he was a fool if he went further with them, for they were nothing but a pair of drunken bullies acting with no authority from any one. They then turned their attention to Frazier, had a pistol and fired it off, to frighten the crowd, as was supposed, into submission. In a short time they again approached Neff and asked him if he had asked for a hatchet to use upon them; Neff replied that he had, and that he should have split them through if he had got it. Upon receiving this answer they attacked Neff more furiously than before, flourishing their pistol, and making some passes at him with their fists. Neff again got loose, ran into the store and seized a hatchet and told them the first one that took hold of him again was a dead man, if he could kill him. The cowards drew their pistols but stood at a respectful distance, and finally left the house.

While this was going on, Miller went to a house near by and asked for a gun; not being able to get one he went up to his own house and looked for his discharge papers, thinking that he might in this way get rid of his troublesome companions. He discovered, however, that he had sent them to Hollidaysburg previously, and of course could not show them. His pursuers soon followed him, went to his house and compelled him to go with them to Petersburg. He went in his own sleigh as before; his wife went with him, and had a cowhide for the villains' backs. Miller told them if they would lay down their firearms he would "kick" them both before they would start.

They all went to Petersburg, where Dr. Orady stated to Miller's (black) guards that he knew him to have been discharged on account of physical disability; so they released him. Mr. John Dopp, ticket agent at Petersburg, examined Mr. Frazier's papers and pronounced them genuine, but the fellows insisted it was "d—d forgery," and held on to him. We understand when they reached Tyrone they had got sober, and then agreed that Frazier's papers were all right, and wanted him to go back. He refused, and made them go with him to Hollidaysburg.

To sum up all—These "guards" were a rough pair, evidently bent on mischief—perhaps to make a little money. They met on their way up from Petersburg, John Arman, with a sled load of wheat; they stopped him and told him he must turn round and take them up the valley; he gave them a short answer, when they reached into their pockets for a pistol and swore they had arms; he swore he had arms, too; they then told him he might go. He said he guessed so, too, for if he got at them he would "tan their hides like h—l."

When they were on their way down in the evening they met a man who said something to them that seemed to offend their dignity; they jumped out of their sled with pistol in hand and tried to catch him, but he got out of their reach.

We would add, further, that Capt. Lloyd, when being informed of those soldiers' misconduct, ordered their arrest immediately. He was very sorry that the affair had taken place, and would do his utmost to prevent it being repeated. He said they had no business in that neighborhood, and were entirely outside of their bounds of operation.

Important Internal Revenue Decisions.

By decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the receipt given to a sheriff by a plaintiff or his attorney, for money collected upon a judgment is subject to stamp duty where the amount of such receipts is for a sum exceeding twenty dollars.—Such receipt cannot be held to be exempt under the provisions of the statute exempting receipts given for the satisfaction of any mortgage, judgment or decree of court; but a receipt given by the sheriff to that defendant, upon payment or satisfaction of the judgment on the return of the sheriff upon the order of execution, can be regarded as exempt from stamp duty.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has made the following decision: A bond given to procure an appeal is exempt from stamp duty as a bond, it being given in a legal proceeding; when however, such bond is the process by which the case is transferred from an inferior to a superior court, it is subject to stamp duty of fifty cents as an appeal. An alias summons is not an original process, but an interlocutory one issued in a suit which has been commenced and is standing upon the docket of the court, and such cases, the original summons having been duly stamped, such alias summons would be exempt from stamp duty.

Plundering Cars.

A young man named Bishop Cozzens, arrested at Altoona for stealing from Pennsylvania railroad cars, has confessed his guilt, and implicated an entire family named Burkholder. Their house, situated some distance below the town, was visited, and a large quantity of dry goods, groceries, &c., to the amount of $20,000 to $25,000, found secreted in the house, barn, and other out buildings. Burkholder, his four sons and two daughters were arrested and gave bail for their appearance. Cozzens is a stepson to a son-in-law of Burkholder, and the robbery seems to have been quite a family affair, as another son-in-law named Hawke, was subsequently arrested, and another lot of goods found in his house. It seems that Cozzens, who had been in the employ of the railroad company, had by some means obtained possession of a car key, by which access was had to freight cars standing upon the siding, and the most valuable goods removed. They were first taken to the house of the son-in-law, in the borough, and removed thence to Burkholder's by sleds and other conveyances. Several wagon loads of goods, of every description, have been recovered, worth at least $15,000. Suspicion was first directed to the parties arrested by the fact that they had been trading in groceries and other goods.

MARRIED.

On March 1st, 1865, at the Farmers' Hotel, Huntingdon, by Rev. G. W. Zahmizer, JOHN KNEPPE, of Maryland, to CAROLINE BRUMBAUGH, of Bedford county, Penna.

On the eve of March 6, 1865, by Rev. S. H. Reid, Mr. C. JAMES McDEVITT, to Miss RACHEL J. SPRAWKLE, both of Porter township.

On the 9th of March, 1865, by the same, Mr. FRANCIS S. BYRES, to Miss LUZZET FOGLEY, both of Markelsburg.

On the 14th of February, 1865, by the same, Mr. WILLIAM VAN TINE, to Miss AMANDA J. MAGEE.

At residence of bride's parents in Jackson tp., March 9, 1865, by Rev. M. L. Smith, Mr. JAS. H. EWING of Huntingdon, Indiana, to Miss MAGGIE W. JACKSON.

DIED.

Died at her grandmother's in Scotts'ville, Huntingdon county, of inflammation of the brain, SARAH LELIE BENCE, aged 21 months, youngest daughter of P. H. and M. J. Bence.

The deceased was a loving and interesting child though much afflicted, "but earth and time were trifled with; 'Tis but a passing hour, and all is gone; 'Tis but a passing hour, and all is gone; 'Tis but a passing hour, and all is gone."

After an illness of some two weeks she passed from earth, not only to enjoy the society of a mother, who only 16 months preceded her, but the love of him who took little children in his arms and blessed them, and said "Suff for little children to come into me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

We pray that the comforter may ever abide with the grandmother and the father that it is now on the field a soldier for his country; and while the Lord has seen proper in his wise and righteous providence, to take away from them in the absence of 16 months the former's husband, and the latter's wife and daughter, yet their sorrow not as those that have no hope. O, then, may they be taught by this bereavement, to give the greater heed to the words of our Master, "Be ye therefore ready also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not." So that when death shall be swallowed up in victory, they may meet these loved ones that have gone before, and forever enjoy communion with them, where Jesus their Saviour is.

C. R. M.
Sallito, March 8, 1865.

Borough Election.

There will be an election for the following officers in this borough on Friday next, March 17th. We trust that capable and honorable men will be selected to fill the respective offices:

- 1 Judge of Elections,
2 Inspectors of Elections,
2 School Directors,
2 Justices of the Peace,
1 Assessor,
1 Constable.

A Present.

We are under many obligations to Mr. S. B. Chaney, for a box of prime cigars. It will be remembered that Mr. C is the clever and accommodating salesman in the wholesale store of R. Cunningham & Co., and all who desire purchasing Goods from an agreeable gentleman will please call at the store of the above firm on Railroad street, near the H. & B. T. depot.

The Poulton Billiard Saloon, Harrisburg.

Billiard players visiting Harrisburg will find the old establishment which has been in successful operation since 1836, one of the best regulated saloons in the city. Every comfort is provided for visitors, and the extensive patronage enjoyed by the proprietor is an evidence that he knows how to conduct the establishment acceptably. Attention is invited to the advertisement, by which it will be seen that no liquor is sold on the premises.
