THE HUNTINGDON GLOBE has reached its twentieth volume. We have always regarded it as one of the very ablest journals in the State, distin guished as well for its editorial industry as for its typographical beauty. May it continue to prosper for many years to come is our greeting to its editor on the anniversary of its birthday .- Daily Harrisburg Telegraph.

Thank you, for the high toned compliment. We could say the same of you, but it is unnecessary in view of the fact that while in the midst of office your industry prompted you to appreciation of your beauty and ability. May the fiery ordeal through which you have passed have thoroughly purged you of any to us unnoticeable defects. We would remind you, however, good friend, the Globe has reached its twenty-first volume.

The well known correspondent of the Boston Journal, who writes under the signature of Burleigh, thus relates the story of Grant's entrance into the United States Army at the outset of the rebellion:

"Four years ago this very month Mrs. Grant lived in her quiet home in your late misfortune of a destroyed Galena. Her husband was Mr. Grant the leather dealer, a plain, modest resecure continued and uninterrupted liable man, without much apparent force, who attracted very little attention any way. The war had commenced. The flag had been shot away from Sumpter, and shot out of a rebel cannon at Memphis. One morning Mr. Grant called on Congressman Washburne, who resides in Galena. He told Mr. W. that he did not feel right—that he could not sleep nights that he felt that he was not doing his duty. Washburne asked him what expense; but here I am at home doing ployment: and bankruptey, starvation my place."
