WHERE DOES JEFF. DAVIS STAND?-Since the trial of the conspirators has closed, and the doom proportionate to the extent of their several crimes been fixed upon every one of them, the question recurs as to the fate of the incomparable traitor, Jeff. Davis. No doubt, he with great anxiety, has been awaiting in his dungeon the finale to the trial of his accomplices. He has, we infer, often compared (it would make a better contrast) their case with his own, and expected and still expects their doom to be his. They have perished; their fate has been unalterably fixed, and the chief of crime and treason will meet the same end. Jeff. has long since run to the end of his string, and he will shortly be compelled, if we are not greatly mistaken, to hang at the end of his rope. He can now stare grim death in the face, or prepare to meet his final separation by making partial atonement to his God for the scarlet sins he has committed against God's creatures—our brave defenders and for the crime of treason. He must surely feel that his ignominious end is nigh; indeed we can foresee no possible event that will intervene to avert his execution, except natural death, and the days left to him are days of probation which he can devote to prayer and supplication.

THE pecuniary losses to the Confederate States, caused by the rebellion, are almost fabulous. A South Carolina journal estimates the loss to that State alone, at four hundred millions dollars. This consists of slaves, bank, railroad and corporate stocks and personal property; and says that "of all this property, not a vestige is left." If the hundred millions, (which we scarcely winch part of the charge not guilty.

Sentence—And the Commission does believe,) and that of the ten other therefore sentence him, the said David rebellious States were equally large, E. Harold, to be hanged by the neek we can aggregate the pecuniary losses until he be dead, at such time and of the Confederacy at four thousand place as the President of the United States shall direct, two-thirds of the members of the Commission concurring than the debt incurred by the National Government in its efforts to suppress the rebellion- which is estimated at three thousand millions.

SUMMARY PUNISHMENT.-President Johnson allowed the conspirators only twenty-four hours to prepare to meet their death. Protracted, indeed, was their trial, perhaps necessarily, but we A. Atzerott, to be hung by the neck can find no fault of procrastination in until he be dead, at such time and place the decision of the President, nor can we consure him for stern and prompt of the commission concurring therein disposal of the conspirators. The spirit of promptness we believe is a characteristic of Mr. Johnson, and there will bining, confederating and conspiring be events forthcoming that will rebe events forthcoming that will require another display of this virtue. Prompt but not rash, stern but not proud, is our present worthy Executive. He is "plebian" President.

Soldiers for Civil Offices.

Col. John W. Forney, in a letter Col. John W. Forner, in a letter from Washington to his Philadelphia paper, takes strong ground in favor of filling civil offices with capable and faithful soldiers. Speaking of the principle that governed in the late Ohio State Convention, whereby, mainly through army influence, Major General Cox was naminated for Governor. oral Cox was nominated for Governor, he would seem to suggest its applica-tion to Ponnsylvania. He says:

"I am glad to perceive that in the State of Ohio, one of the most brilliant civilians-who proved himself to be a most gallant soldier—has been placed in nomination by the Union party as its candidate for Governor. We cannot too frequently, by examples like this, show that our professions of regard for the soldiers have not been mere profession—that we are not a party of words but of works. When-ever a Union convention assembles, and a brave soldier, especially if he has been wounded in fighting for the old flag, is named as a candidate, and old flag, is named as a candidate, and he is qualified by intelligence and good deportment, he should be preferred to all others, and whenever a vacancy occurs in a public office, or whenever a new appointment is to be made, if its oldiers can be obtained they should be honored with a confidence, which it tary authority under the direction of the prisonors, came forward and read that the sentences in the cases of David the order of the War Department, alternative who has been of David the prisonors, came forward and read that the sentences in the cases of David the prisonors, came forward and read that the sentences in the cases of David the published, approving the sentences and ordering the penalty of death to be inflicted.

A heavy guard was stationed around the direction of the prisonors, came forward and read the order of the War Department, alternative who has been of David to prisonors, came forward and read the pri be honored with a confidence, which tary authority, under the direction of the walls surrounding the grounds, is, at the same time, a substantial recognition of their bravery. The Union men throughout Penusylvania, and the Union men in other States, I note with great joy, are acting upon what is the spontaneous wish of the people and should therefore secure the " prompt action of the politicians."

Their Execution.

WASHINGTON, July 7 .- All the condemned conspirators sentenced to be hanged to day were executed. On the petition of Mary E. Surratt, through her counsel, Messrs. Aiken and Clamfitt, Judge Wylie, of the Supreme Court of this District, directed an issue of a writ of habeas corpus to Gen. Hancock, commanding him to produce in court at ten o'clock this morning the body of Mary E. Surratt, with the cause of detention.

The writ was served on General Hancock, at the Metropolitan Hotel, at 8 o'clock this morning, by United States Marshal Gooding. He immediately consulted with the Attorney General and Secretary of war, and at 10:30 the General had not obeyed the the judge said he had not power to enforce the writ.

Early to-day guards were placed all around the arsenal grounds, to preshall direct, two-thirds of the memscene of action, none being admitted excepting those previously supplied with passes by Maj. Gen. Hancock.

The relatives of Mrs. Surratt and Harrold spent several hours with them during the forenoon, and they were also attended by their spiritual advisers as well also Payne and Atzerott. A few minutes after one o'clock the outer prison door was opened, and Mro: Surratt was supported on her way togallows by two military officers. Next followed Atzerott, Harold and Payne, accompained by a guard and their respective ministers of the gos
