[For the Globe.] THE DYING PRISONER.

Taken from the lips of one of our Soldiers who was Starving to Death at Andersonville, Ga.

am dying, comrades, dying, Far away from friends and home; n this rebel den I'm lying, Suffering, starving, all alone.

Had I but a drink of water, Or the smallest piece of bread, Thus to quench my thirst and hunger, Ere I'm numbered with the dead!

Oh! this loathsome, dreary prison! Oh! this cruel, rebel den! Where our mother's sons are lying, Treated more like brutes than men!

No warm shelter spread above us. No green fields in which to roam. Oh, God ! grant that those who love us Could have the power to send us home.

If I could but see my mother. As upon the ground I lie, Mingled with each starving brother, 'T would not be so hard to die.

If I could but get a letter, Or some news would only come, Oh! I know I would get better. If I could but hear from home Surely some one called my name, And I thought some one was coming. And would take me home again. Home I think I'm going, comrades, am dreaming, comrades, dreaming,

But somehow my sight grows dim, And I see them coming nearer, And I think I hear thom sing.

Where's the flag, our old flag, comrades, With its brave red, white, and blue: I would tell those rebel monsters That I served my country true,

Near they're coming, comrades, nearer, I can see them playing now; Bless God I they are bringing water For my fevered lips and brow.

will thirst no longer, comrader, For a river now I see. And beside its crystal waters They have come to carry me.

Is it home? It seems more lovely Than the home that once was mine: And the streets are like the starlight, All day long they brightly shine

There's a wide and waving meadow, Where in peace I'll rest and roam. Oh, thank God! he has released me, And I now am going home.

There's no dark and dreary "dead line," There's no rebel sentinel there ; Ol the fields seem wide and lovely, And all things are bright and fair. Farewell, comrades, I am going,

For the messenger has come, And I see clear water flowing; Lord, be praised! I'm going home! And the brave and suffering soldier Searful Leap and Miraculous Escape.

We clip the following from the Alpears wanted to be an actress. The girl to us is unknown:

train, (upon which he assures us the heroine of the adventure returned to her home on Sunday afternoon last,) we learn that a young girl named Mary Lee, a resident of Huntingdon, became infatuated with the tint and tinsel of show life, as displayed in the 'ground and lofty tumbling' of a circus troupe which exhibited in Huntingdon a few days since, and determined 'for to go to see the monkey show' all the time, or in other words, to become part and parcel of the aforesaid equestrian establishment. Accordingly she adorned herself in her 'best bib and tucker,' and in the 'wee sma' hours ayant the twal,' when traveling shows usually take their departure for other scenes, she took up her line of march in company with tigors, bears, and 'sich like,' which formed the menageriel portion of the exhibition, to say nothing of the to her more dangerous associates in the shape of dangerous associates in the shape of Jacob Cresswell vs F. II. Lane et al human bipeds, and when daylight dawned she was to the parental roof unknown. As a matter of course the parents of the girl were justly indignant at her wayward conduct, and measures were immediately taken to turn her stops from the hazardons turn her steps from the hazardous paths in which they fain would tread. Accordingly, a messenger was despatched to Lewistown, where the 'show' was to exhibit, to intercept the foolish girl, and bring her back, but she, 'getting wind' of the movement, determined to place a greater distance between herself and duty, and for that purpose became a passenger in one of the eastward bound passenger trains, doubtless intending to take refuge in some other locality and wait until the

But the party in pursuit was on her track, and got upon the same train in which she was a passenger, just as it was 'pulling out.' Before he made his presence known, however, the girl on the community in which he lived, espied him, and her fertile brain im and obtained an immortality worth mediately conceived his object; and as she had evidently made up her mind to 'play show' or die in the attempt, made her way without delay to the platform of the car, the train moving at the time at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, and hositating not, leaped from the car before her intentions were conjectured by those who witnessed her movements. The train was brought to a halt as soon as possible, and parties went back, expecting of course to find her either terribly injured or a mutilated corpse. What was their joyful surprise, however, to discover that she was not only reither one nor the other, but that she had apparently escaped with but slight, if any, injuries—thus manifesting be-yond a doubt that if the show business wasn't fit for her, she was at least fitted for the show business. Her miraculous escape can only be attributable to the expansion of her crinoline skirts -an article which has not unfrequently played a prominent part in preserhuman life. She was brought back to her home on Sunday last, as above narrated, and it is to be hoped that her brief experience in 'acrobatic' feats will be sufficient to serve her the balance of her lifetime."

"Row On!"-"For the first five years of my professional life," once said a gentleman to us, "I had to row against wind and stream and tide." "And what did you do?" was our question. "Do,' replied he, "why I rowed on to be sure." And so he did row on, and to a good purpose too, until he came to open sea, took favorable breeze, and brought his voyage to a most successful termina tion, leaving behind him a most enviable reputation for wisdom, and impressing the mark of his strong mind and excellent character deep and clear and obtained an immortality worth more than a monarch's crown in the memery of thousands. His remark descrives to be remembered as a motto. The great business of all is to "row on" with unflinching courage and steady perseverance. All trades and professions have their difficulties, and almost every individual meets with discouragements. The only way, therefore, to go ahead is to "row on." Decision of character, determination of will, the resolution to press on, when sure we are on the right track or in pursuit of a good and honorable end, this is the secret of living so as to come out at last safe and sound. GENERAL GRANT BEFORE THE WAR AND Now.—Judge Moody' in a speech at the Sherman banquet, in St. Louis, spoke as follows of General Grant: An intimate acquaintance of many years enables me to do so. I knew General Grant long before this rebel lion began. We were both poor then, struggling for a livelihood. We had no interest in the rise and fall of stock; we had no railroad shares nor corner lots, and money for to morrow's mar ket was often our chief subject of inquiry. I know him when he hauled wood to St. Louis on the Gravois road, and later when, with impaired health, sought the appointment to a co ty office but the wise county court could not see his merits. They ap pointed in his stead another man long ince forgotten. Three weeks ago I had an opportu nity to call on the General at his beautiful home on Georgetown Heights, and I declare to you now I can see no difference in the manners of the man now and when I first knew him No fussy body-guard on "bay horses," no obsequious orderlies, no white aproned lackeys followed him, and his three stars never got about the horizon except when duty requires them to ap-

In General Grant the nation has a military leader whom it need not fear to trust with power. He is modest and unassuming to a fault; of incorruptible integrity, and ardent love of country; calous of the military power and obe dient to the civil: devoted to present duty, whatever that duty may be; plain and simple in his taste and man ners; not desiring, but studiously avoiding political popularity; a faithful and devoted husband, fond father and affectionate son. He never for got a friend or remembered an enemy His great heart is free from that mas ter passion of little souls-personal vindictiveness.

SPECIAL NOTICE. TO THE LADIES.—Do you really intend to cease wearing the beautiful styles now so prevalent, or dress less elegantly, because the rebel Jeff. Davis, was captured in Fashionable Female attire One moment's calm reflection will surely serve to change your rash resolve. The angels had too much good sens to lay aside their pure chaste robes of white, because they had for a time served to hide the deformities of tha Prince of Rebels, the Devil. Can you err in following the example of Angels? Then having made up your minds that you will continue to dress tastefully regardless of rebelacts, do not forget to call at the store of the subscriers, who will be happy at all times to furnish you with such articles of dress as you may desire. Urgo your fath ers, husbands, brothers, neighbors and children to visit the same store. They can here be suited in good articles of Boots, Shoes, Clothing Material, Hats, Caps, Queens ware and a general assortment of Groceries, on as re sonable terms as at any House in town.
