COMES WHEN LEAST COPPECTED.

I propose to check, and effectually dissipate more ache and pain, and to accomplish more perfect equilibrium of all the circulating fluids in the human system, than can be effected by any other, or all other methods of medical aid in the same since of time.

THIS POPULAR REMEDY is fast coming into use, for the fact that I cure, free of clarge, all these complaints whenever there is an opportunity to do so. As soon as its applied it almost mirror distributionsly kills the pain. I do not ask you to buy before you are certain of its efficiency. If you have an acheor pain, it is warranted to do all it purports on the label.

I do not propose to cure crery disease—only a class rectly on the absorbents, reducing glandular and other swellings in incredible short time, without any possible danger from its use under any possible circumstances.

This is an internal and external medicine—composed of roots, herbs and barks, such as our forefathers used.—There is abountful supply on earth to curo all complaints if we only know what they were.

This has been a great study with the Medical Faculty for many years, to find out the kinds best adapted to the above complaints—how to put them together, and what proportions to use.

Hence, after his return from Kansas he associated himself with the party that sustained Stephen A Douglass, which was greatly instrumental in breaking up the pro slavery faction, and effecting the election of Abraham bread only, the doct visitor, in many cases.

Such is the character of Gen. Geary. The Garden,

Few farmers seem to realize the importance of having a good garden, yet a good one will produce more profit, according to the labor bestowed, than any other part of the farm. A good garden is not only profitable, as producing food for the family, but it is productive of health, as bountiful supply of vegetables on the table, will frequently keep a family healthy; and when their food consists constantly of salt meats, potatoes, and way is north, and which south.

Thoro is a great mistake made, we think, by almost all people who have gardens, in putting beets, carrots, parsnips, &c.. in beds. It is much better to grow such things in long rows, a foot them easily to hoe them. Suppose you rowed, 100 feet square. First rake it off with a heavy iron rake, then set a line for the first row, drawn tight, then with the corner of your hoe, mark the row, where the seed is sown, directly under the line, which one can do al most as fast as a man can welk. At each end of the plat, you should have moted to the rank of Brigadier General a stick for a measure of the width of the rows. Now, having marked out your first row, lay down the first meas, ure and set the line for the next one, and so on till the space you desire to sow is all marked out, "as straight as a line."

If you desire to sow beets, carrots, parsnips, and the like, the corner of the hoe should not make a furrow over an inch deep, with the dirt raised some on each side, and when the seed is sown, and the ground levelled, it will not be covered over half an inch deep, which is enough. On this system of sowing vegetables, you will accomplish double in the same time, what you could by making beds for them, while the crops will be much better, owing to the fact that we generally sow seeds in rows too close n beds.—Rural American.

Put tools under cover. A hoe, spade or plow will last one's life time, almost, if properly taken care of and housed. If you have no tool house, erect one, for you cannot afford to let your farming implements lie round oose, exposed to the weather and the chances of being run over and broken. A thrifty and careful farmer is known at once by the good quality, fine condition and lustrous polish of his tools.
