[COMMUNICATED.] SHIRLEYSBURG, March 12, 1866. FRIEND LEWIS:—An article in your paper of last week, over the signature of Henry R. Shearer, demands from me a brief and passing notice, and ask your kindness to indulge me a space in the columns of the Globe. Self-vindication from charge, false as it is malicious, prompts me to the task, unplea-

From my first acquaintance with Mr. Shearer, for several years ago, I entertained and exercised towards him the most kind and friendly relation in all my intercourse with him, both private and public, and know not why, for aught I have done, said or written, he so basely and unwarrantably assails me through the press, seemingly to puff himself into notoriety at the expense of one, as I am, old enough to be his grandfather, whom he supposed too humble and submissive to vindicate his character from aspersion so foul and malicious he ventured to advance. It rests on Mr. Shearer to explain; or he must bear the brand of a noted villifier —if not a liar.

It seems in the outset of his article, which is exquisitely elaborate, that his tender dignity was marred by a slight allusion in the Herald to some irregularity in carrying the mail by Mr. Shearer; a paper with which I have no connection whatever - a fact well known to Mr. Shearer.

I stake his vengeance on the editor of the Herald for daring to notice his public derelictions, real or supposed; he resorts to the most fulsome blas phemy and irreverence to the Deity by sacrilegiously applying the term immaculate"—a most sacred attribute of Jehovah, the Saviour of the world, in derision as a prefix to his name, calling him "immaculate Ben."

After thus vainly trifling with the attribute of Deity he seeks another victim to vent his exorbitant spleen on, and because I happen to be the father of "Ben" I was selected as the object to further reak his vengeance on; and having discarded his God and villified me, he concludes with the boast of an "approved motto," "never to shoot at game more than once," &c., and drops his peacock plumes after having shouted at me, like a spoilt and saucy ur chin with ugly mouth and pouched snout, charges which be knew to be false and unwarranted in fact. If the axiom is true that "he who steals will lie" and vice versa, it may also be true that he who disrespects Deity by taking the name of God in vain, will also commit both. This is a problem I submit to Mr. Shearer to solve, and that for his own benefit.

His self-praise and attempt at puffing up his greatness, by coupling his miniature deeds to those of Captain Blair, is also to me quite a startling affair; and for the benefit of Mr. Shearer I will give him a brief portrayal .-Captain Blair, while proprietor of the stage line, in response to calls by the National Government yielded to its call for troops to beat back the rebel hordes. He buckled on his armorraised a company of brave men, who like himself left the comforts of family and home, to serve their country's cause. Not so, however, with Mr. H. R. Shearer. Although hearty and hale as Captain Blair, his valor lay in his breeches. When happening to be hit by draft, he paid his commutation and comfortably staid at home. Captain Blair, while gallantly heading his company in the memorable battle at Gettysburg, fell, wounded in the right arm, which, to save his life, was amputated at the shoulder; yet he narrowly escaped from death.

While yet in his suffering condition his contract term expired. A re-letting took place in 1864. Capt. Blair applied for a renewal of his contract, a fact well known to Mr. Shearer, who, instead of doing honor to and favoring a brave and wounded soldier, he opposed him with might and main in getting the contract over Captain Blair by underbidding him some four or five hundred dollars per year; inflicting considerable loss to the captain in road stock, without deriving any material benefit to himself, other than the small gratification of beating a wounded and meritorious soldier in the contest. The result is, Mr. Shearer took the contract too low to maintain his line well stock ed; and he is drudging along as best he can with uncomfortable and rickety coaches, detrimental to public travel and with irregular mail facilities.

I advert to the foregoing facts in or der to remind Mr. H. R. Shearer that there is great danger in throwing stones at others while living in a glass tenement himself; and also to give the public a knowledge of his fitness to claim greatness for himself as seem ingly he does by hitting at Capt. Blair. In conclusion, I admonish Mr. Shearer hereafter to "honor old age," and not wantonly and unprovokedly assail another as he did me; and say to him candidly-if he wants more from me he need only provoke it as he did this much I have said, and he will be given full measure, heaped and running over.

Ample ammunition yet remains in store. But O, don't be vulgar nor profane.

A Fellow who had ought to know better has just perpetrated the follows ing piece of uncalled for impertinence: Life is short, and women are many. Men have no time for a close examination of each one, and to her who crowds her best goods into a showcase is often awarded the highest prize.

NOTIONS.

To Merchants and Business Men. THE undersigned having recently been appointed agent for the New York National Ink Company, hereby gives notice to merchants, business men, and to consumers of all classes that he is prepared to supply the market with an article of This which in addition to being the best in use, is emphatically the cheapest ever offered for sale in this country.

It neither corrodes the pen, nor moulds the inkstand, is of a rich blush tint, flows freely, and is perfectly indictible, giving it advantages not possessed by any other Ink, whether of foreign or domestic manufacture. This Ink contains no sediment and will not therefore, thicken as most inks do, the last drop being as thin and clear as the first. HAVING PURCHASED the entire stock of Win. Colon, we now offer to the public treasonable prices our interest stock of RELIGIOUS, first. All orders whether whelesale or retail, will be promptly filled, at lower rates than as good an article can be purchased in the cities or elsewhere. Persons who entertain doubts as to the superior quality and chempness of this that are respectfully enterted to give it a trial John H. Clark, sub-agent will cauvass the county for the purpose of introducing this lak.
