The Globe.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

TO MY MOTHER.
Though thy step is slow and feeble,
And thy hair is turning gray;
Yet to me thou art still dearer,
Dearest with each coming day.
If sometimes speak unkindly,
You will pardon me, I know,
For I could not bear to grieve you—
I would rather kindness show.
Thy advice and tender warnings,
And your unrelenting care,
Led my roving thoughts to ponder—
Taught me to avoid each snare.
Each admonition I remember,
And thy love I'll not forget;
If in the past I have offended,
Such ingratitude I now regret. J. M. C.

HOW I BEGAN LIFE.

I began life by running away from home. Boileau, we are told, was driven into his career by the hand of fate and the peck of a turkey. Attila started in life with no other cause and capital than an old sword, which he was adroit enough to palm off for the divine weapon of Mars; and Robespierre owed his political career to wetting his stockings—and there heard "words which burn," that fired his soul, and determined his course in life. My running away from home arose from a minor mortification, caused by carrying a pretty girl over a brook.

Donald Len and myself were good friends at fourteen years of age, and we both regarded with a little more than friendship pretty Helen Graham, "our oldest girl at school." We romped and danced together, and this lasted for such a length of time that it is with feelings of bewilderment that I look back upon the mystery of two lovers containing friends. But the time came, as must, when jealousy lit her spark in my boyish bosom, and blow it into a consuming flame.

Well do I remember how and when the "green-eyed" perpetrated this incendiary deed. It was on a cold October evening, when Helen Donald and myself were returning with our parents from a neighboring hamlet. As we approached a ford where the water we prepared to carry Helen across, as we were accustomed to, with hands interwoven, "chair fashion," and thus carried our pretty passenger over the brook. Just as we were in the middle of the water—which was cold enough at the time to have frozen anything like feeling out of boys less hardy than ourselves—a faint pang of jealousy lit my heart. Why it was, I know not, for we had carried Helen fifty times across the brook ere now, without emotion, but this evening I thought or fancied that Helen gave Donald an undue preference by casting her arm around his neck, while she steadied herself on my side by holding the cuff of my jacket.

No James can burn so quickly, or with so little fuel as jealousy. Before we had reached the opposite bank, I was wishing Donald at the bottom of the sea. Being naturally impetuous, I burst out with—
"Ye need no hand so gingerly, Helen, as if ye feared a fall." I can say ye're lighter than Donald can half of ye."
Surprised at the vehemence of my tone, our queen interposed with an admission that we were both strong, and that she had no idea of sharing my powers. But Donald's ire was kindled, and he uttered denied that I was at all qualified to compare with him in feats of moral courage. On each topology were generally envious, and by the time we reached the opposite side it was settled that the point should be determined by our singly carrying Helen across the ford in our arms.

Helen was to determine who had carried her most easily, and I settled with myself privately in advance, that the one who obtained the preference would really be the person who stood highest in her affections. The reflection stimulated me to exert every effort, and I verily believe to this day, that I could have carried Donald and Helen on either arm like feathers. But I must not anticipate.

We suffered all the rest of the party to pass quietly along, and then returned to the ford. I lifted Helen with the utmost ease, and carried her like an infant to the middle of the water. Jealousy had inspired a warmer love, and it was with feelings unknown before, and felt the pressure of her cheek against mine. All went swimmingly, or rather wadingly, for a minute. But alas in the very deepest part of the ford, I trod on a treacherous piece of wood, which, I suppose, on a smooth stone. Over I rolled, bearing Helen with me, nor did we rise until fairly soaked from head to foot.

I need not describe the taunts of Donald, or the more accusing silence of Helen. Both believed that I had fallen from mere weakness, and my rival demonstrated his superior ability by bearing her in his arms for a long distance on her homeward path. As we approached the house, Helen, feeling dry, and better humored, attempted to console me. But I preserved silence. I was mortified beyond redress.

That night I packed up a few things and ran away. My boyish mind, sensitive and irritated, exaggerated the negation which I had received, and prompted me to a course which, fortunately, led me to better results than usually attend such irregularities. I went to Edinburgh, where I found an uncle, a kindhearted, childless man, who gladly gave me a place in his house, and employed me in his business. Wealth flowed in upon him. I became his partner—went abroad—resided four years on the continent, educated, in short, everything but married.

Popping the Question.

"Too bashful to 'pop the question' in the usual way, Major Jones persuades his sweet heart to put up a stocking, which will hold a couple of bushels, on the night when Santa Claus pays his visits, receiving her promise to keep forever what he gave her. Into this the gallant and lovelorn Major contrives to introduce himself at the 'witching hour of night.' But we will let the Major speak for himself.

I remained up till midnight, and when they were all gone to bed I softly went into the back gate and went up to the porch and that, above all, was a great big meal bag, hanging by the joist. It was monstrous unhandy to get to it, but I was determined not to back out. So I set some chairs on the top of a bench and got hold of the rope and let myself down into the bag; but just as I was getting in, the bag swung against the chairs, and down I went with a terrible racket. But nobody didn't wake up but the grato big dog, and here he came rippin' and tavin' thro' the yard like wrath, and round and round he went trying to find what was the matter. I set down in the bag and didn't breathe louder than a kitten, for fear he'd find me out. The wind began to blow 'bominable cold, and the old bag kept turning round, swinging so as to make me see sick as the mischief. I was afraid to move for fear the rope would break and let me fall, and that I set with my teeth rattlin' like I had the ager.

It seemed it would never come day-light, and I do believe I didn't love Miss Mary so powerful, I would have only spat for my heart, and it didn't beat more 'an two ticks a minute, only when I thought how she would be surprised in the mornin', and then it went on a cauter. By and by, the cussed old dog came on the porch, and began to snarl about the bag, and then he barked like he thought he'd tread someboddy. "Beware, beware, beware," sez I, and I felt all over in one spot, for I expected he'd nip me; and what made it worse, I didn't know whereabouts he'd take hold. Bow, wow, wow! Then I tried coaxing. "Come here good feller," sez I, and I whistled a little to see what he'd do. "Beware, beware, beware," sez I, and I felt all over in one spot, for I expected he'd nip me; and what made it worse, I didn't know whereabouts he'd take hold. Bow, wow, wow! Then I tried coaxing.
