SOLDIERS, VOTE AS YOU FOUGHT.-Every man who entered the army during the rebellion is supposed to know why he went forth to fight. He what was meant by "the warfor the Union." It had and could have no other meaning. The rebel States fought to get out of the Union, but our armies defeated them and they were thus kept in the Union. And now, can we vote to keep them out, at the caprice if such men as Sumner and Stevens, who declare that the States are to be treated as conquered Territories ? out until they are willing to do just as they say. We must thwart their object by voting for mon who are willing to admit loyal Southern Representatives. Unless we do this we will have fought invain.

State to the Union, at no slight risk ty. The general in command of the is, was about to give it up to the enemy, when Johnson vowed it should to defend it, and succeeded. How many of the Radicals who now vent their splenish insults against him. would, in the same way, have braved the hot pressure of public feeling if of a Radical is that he holds and advocates the most extreme opinions of the times when they are popular, and would have been as ardent a Disunionist in Tennessee during the war as he now is in this State when times have changed and the South is ready to take again its old place in the Union.

152. The Radicals say a great deal bout excluding Southern Representatives from Congress until, they give sufficient guarantees. Now, notwithstanding the oath they will each have to take to preserve, protect and defend practical view of the subject and that is why are not the "Copperheads," so. called, in the north, also excluded until they give sufficient guarantees? And more, why were they not expelled during the rebellion by the same Congress that now unjustly wants to exclude Southern men? The people who elect Southern Representatives are the people of the same Union that the people of North are, and they are entitled to the same rights under the Constitution. Let Congress give reasons for not expelling those from Congress who sym-pathized with the rebels and then we an understand them better, now that they try to exclude Southern men. 137 The difference between the Philidelphia Convention of the 14th of August and the Philadelphia Convention of the 3d of September is, one was all wisdom, the other was all gas. In the first, all was harmony, and business frage-was thrown in, which almost split the Convention. The Radicals of the North and the Radicals of the South don't agree on this subject, but hearty reception in every city and yet some are willing, for the sake of town through which he has passed.office or honors, to go with them.
