A. Pouglas. The party leaders in the South are again at work inciting the people to oppose the Constitutional Amendments imposed on them by the North. This policy we indeed deprecate, not only for the best welfare of the South, but for the berefit of the nation. At first, after the late elections, we thought to consider that in those amendments rested their salvation; but hardly bas the result of those elections been known until we hear that Southern leaders are opposing them. There may be good reasons assigned for this opposition, but we cannot see what practical good will result, if the masses of the Southern people oppose them, while the masses of the Northern people favor them. The leaders may oppose them because one of its provisions deprive them of holding office, and this is the strongest incentive in the amendment to excite opposition from the Southern leaders; but yet what good can be done, what peace restored, when the Northerners are determined that they shall not hold any office? It was this argument, indeed, more than any other contained in the amendment, that actuated thousands of the easily persuaded in the North to vote for the amendments; it was the argument in every Republican's mouth, and launched forth in every Republican paper. Reason and common sense could find no responses to that one sophistry -Do you want rebels to rule?

That we might say carried the election.

And now, what can rebel leaders in

But we fear that many are led to oppose the amendments because they have been told that even should the amendments are the Congressional Plan of Reconstruction, and then hear it said by leading ment in the North and in Congress that even should the ly. South adopt that plan of reconstruction, in which it had no voice, it will and are almost led to apologize for their seeming resistance to that plan. To refuse the South admission after ratifying those conditions would be the night, and died this morning, as we have stated. Miss Seward was in and the thoroughfares are filled with anxious crowds. Business is pretty conditions more severe; because if so. her 22d year. vere they might be made mild, but if these are accepted, nothing could actuate them to adopt further conditions in order to be admitted, because being deceived once they could not trust us again. But for our part we have faith in the pledges of the people, and we believe that when they decreed the South should be admitted on the terms ring a blessing on themselves and posterity; and they would epen the way for renewed activity and prosperity within their borders, causing immi-This would be gained if they accept opposite, we believe, will be the result if they persist in opposing them.

We, it is true, did not favor the amendments, nor, of themselves considered, do we yet; for what we predicted, is inevitably coming to pass—Grant. He loves vain display and af-that negroes north and south would fectation no more than he did six years dicted, is inevitably coming to passget a vote through the implication of the first section. But we now favor them through policy, believing that the South is suren to get and happily he lives the south is suren to get and happily he lives here with his family. What, by his little son on horseback, follow, an outbreak would take place, in which ever we do we desire done for the perpetuation of the Union, and the restoration of peace and harmony in every section. Wherever we see the best chance for the accomplishment of such a result that chance we will approve and endeavor to improve. We hope to see right prevail and wrong abolished, in whatever quarter; and for this, reason we would like to see the South accept the amendments, and thus frustrate the designs of the Radi-
