THE MESSAGE.

We give the President's Message in full to-day. While the President is respectful towards Congress, he remains firm in the opinions expressed a year ago, with this difference: then he was determined to fight his battle with Congress within the lines of the party that elected him-now he recognizes the old leaders through whose influence the once great Democratic party was disgraced and made powerless, as his confidential advisers and friends. In such company he of course must go under. The Reeds, the Woodses, the Biglers, the Vallandighams, the Porters, the Morrisseys, all in sympathy with the rebels when our country was in danger of being destroyed, cannot save him. They have not yet repented of their sins against their God and their country-and the people will not be influenced to give them power, although thousands and hundreds of thousands of voters under their influence were as loyal and true to their country during the war as men of any other party.

The decisions by the people at the late elections were in favor of sustaining Congress as against the President's policy. Those decisions are law, and the people must obey. If Congress does not abuse its power the whole country will soon be prosperous and happy.

CONGRESS.

The whole country is now watching closely the proceedings of Congress. The first week's work is more of a confused mass than an indication that any certain line of policy will be pursued. Two much work has been cut out in a short time to expect close fits. Too many members are anxious to be heard -to do something. One thing looks possible, that every appointment made by the President, (unless to fill a vacancy) will be rejected by the Senate. As office is an important item in politics, the appointments of the President will most likely receive the early attention of Congressmen. We give in othpropositions of members, and will en-

PROF. HAGUE ON THAD. STEVENS .-Observing the arrival of Thad. Stevens at Washington on the 22d ult., and his announcement to the numerous friends who called upon him, that "he was rather conservative last winter, but that he intended to be a radical hereafter," called the Astrologer's attention to his Horoscope. Mr. Stevens speaks truly; he will be radical; his stars show it; he will be the blind and reckless leader of the blind, regardless of the quagmires in the path he treads, or attempts to lead his country. If Thaddeus Stevens is alive in 1869 he will not be in Congress. Even 1868 will tell against him, let who may be will when he is in his right mind; that their customers to hear of it, will not be when he dies. So say Representative Bingham, of the stars which ruled at his birth. But while he lives to travel the earth thore will bo a continued ruffling of the political waters of his country, and those who happen to be his political associates and learned together in on. associates and leagued together in opposition to a civilized reunion of States will fall with him, in the fall of 1868 and some of them before.

BOLD PREDICTION. - We see that Prof. Hague, the Astrologist, predicts the release of Jeff. Davis, and has fixed upon the day that he will get his walking papers, the 14th of February, 1867. The men who had charge of the falling stars, appear to have missed a figure. We shall see now how near Hague will come in his calculation.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 3, 1866.

The Senate and House were called o order at 12, m.

The President's message was received ed and read.

[The spirit and feeling of Senators and members can be judged by the folowing bills and resolutions offered:] Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, presented a bill to prevent the illegal appointment of officers of the United, States, as follows: Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

Section 1. That no money shall be paid from the Treasury of the United States to any person who, having been nominated for any office and been rejected by the Senato, and subsequentsion, or if any person so rejected and reappointed shall hold or exercise the reappointed shall hold or exercise the functions of the office from which he Cobb on a charge of false imprison was rejected by the Senate, after the close of the session of the Senate at which be was rejected, or if any accounting or disbursing officer shall alsalary, fees, perquisites or expenses, accruing after the close of the session of the Senate at which he was rejected he shall be deemed guilty of a misde-meanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or at the discretion of the court shall be imprisoned not more

The bill was introduced, read three times, and passed-yeas 111 nays 29.

Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill to regulate removals from office. The first section provides that in all instances of appointments to office by the President, by and with advice and consent of the Senate, the power of removal shall be exercised only in concurrence with the Senate. In case of disability or misconduct o officers occurring during the recess of the Senate, it shall be lawful for the President to suspend the disabled or defaulting officer, and to designate some other person to perform the duties of the office until the Senate shall have an opportunity of acting. The President is to make a report of his action within ten days after the meeting of the Senate, and in case of the refusal of the State suspended officer not confirmed, shall be incapable of holding any office under the United States for the term of three years af-ter such rejection, unless two-thirds of the Senate relieve him from such disability. The bill was read twice and made the order of the day for Friday.

Mr. Wentworth, of Illinois, offered the following:

Resolved, In response to that portion of the President's message that relates to those communities which claimed to be the Confederate States of America, that this House finds in the many acts of disloyalty which have transpired in those communities since its adjournment, as well as in the recent elections in the loyal States, additional reasons for insisting on the adoption of the pending constitutional amendment before it will consider the propriety of giving them Congressional representation.

Mr. Ancona, of Pennsylvania, moved to lay the resolution on the table. Lost.—yeas 32, nays 119. Mr. Broomall, of Pennsylvania, offered the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Territories be instructed to inquire into the expediency of reporting a bill providing territorial governments for the several districts of country within the jurisdiction of the United States formerly occupied by the once existing States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkan-sas and Texas, and giving to all adult male inhabitants born within the limits of the United States, or duly naturalized and not participants in the late rebellion full, equal political right in such territorial governments. Mr. Driggs, of Michigan, offered a resolution calling on the Postmaster General for information in regard to the removal and appointment of postmasters, etc., since the adjournment of last session. Laid over one day under the rule. Mr. Myers, of Pennsylvania, offered a resolution calling on the President for like information in reference to all officers whose appointments the Senate is required to confirm, which was referred to the same committee.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON. Dec. 4.—The Universal Suffrage As sociation of Louisiana, said to consist of thirteen men, has sent a delegation here with a series of resolutions addressed to Congress, in which they ask the impeachment and removal of Andrew Johnson, the abolishment of the present State government of Louisiana, and the establishment of a loyal Territorial government, with a military or provisional government therein. They also ask Congress to provide for a State government therein on the basis of universal suffrage, and also to estab lish universal suffrage throughout the United States.

Dec. 5.—The House had a two hours session to day, most of which was occupied by Mr. Williams, of Pittsburg, Diaries for 1867. in a speech on a bill reported by him from the Judiciary Committee last sead sale at Lewis' Book Store.

sion, to regulate the tenure of office He claimed that Congress could regu late the entire question of removals and appointments, and that by the legislation provided by his bill, no removal from office could be made without the consent of the Senate. His remarks towards the close were severe on the President. A number of amendments were offered to perfect the bill, and it was then postponed until to morrow The indications are that it will pass by a very large majority.

In the Senate there was a debate or the bill, passed by the House on Mon-day, repealing the amnesty power of the President. It came up on a motion to refer to the Judiciary Commit teo. Mr. Chandler repeated his accusations against the President, and reasserted that pardons were sold on the streets by women of doubtful reputa-tion. Mr. Dixon assumed the championship of the President, denied these charges, and asked Mr. Chandler for expenses accruing after the close of the session of the Sess the session of the Senate during which his nomination was rejected; and if any person shall appoint, or sign, or duced. He referred undoubtedly to prepare such appointment or commisting the trial of Lafayette C. Baker, ex-detective of the War Department, who ment. The bill was finally referred. Mr. Sumner introduced his resolu tions on reconstruction, of which he counting or disbursing officer shall allow pay to any person so rejected any ordered to be printed. They declare that all proceedings with a view to reconstruction originating in Executive power are in the nature of usurpation; that this usurpation becomes especially offensive when it sets aside the fundamental truths of our institutions; that it is shocking to common sense, when it undertakes to derive new governments from that hostile population which has just been engaged in armed rebellion, and that all Governments having such origin are necessarily illegal and void; and it is the duty of Congress to proceed with the work of reconstruction, and, to this end it must assume jurisdiction of the States lately in rebellion, except so far as that jurisdiction may have been already renounced, and it must recognize only the loyal and valid "Legislatures" as entitled to representation in Congress or to a voice in the adoption of constitutional amendments. Senator Wade called up his joint resolution of last session, proposing to amend the Constitution of last session, by prohibiting the resolection of President or Vice President of the United States. He made a brief and very temperate speech on the subject, not alluding directly to the present Executive, but taking the ground that all Presidents had of late used their pat-ronage to secure re-election. The resolution was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Dec. 5.—The Republican caucus. to night was attended by nearly every member of the party from both Houses. The first business in order was the report of the Committee appointed at the last caucus, to recommend certain measures for the consideration of the caneus. The Committee recommended first the appointment of a special commit-tee of three to go to New Orleans to investigate the affilite. connected with ted with great applauso and unanimity. Next came the recommendation for the Committee of three to investigate the circumstances attending the murder of three citizens of Maine in South Carolina. This looks foggy as reported by the Committee, but it was understood to have reference to some cause which when brought fully to light will implicate the President in some way. It was agreed to without dissent or inquiry, consequently our special caucus correspondent could not get at the particular points in the It was recommended that the Committee on military affairs inquire into the truth of the allegations that men who were on the Pension roll of the United States army and navy in 1860, and who went into the rebel army and fought through the war, have been reinstated by order of the President or his agents and subordinates, on the pension rolls of the United States since the close of the war. (Great applause.]

It was agreed to pass a bill excluding from the Electoral College in 1868 all States not at that time represented in Congress. This was received with manifestations of great enthusiasm, and the applause it drew forth lasted several minutes.

The recommendation was for a committee of three to investigate what truth there was in the report that the President had restored lands forfeited by Act of Congress.

And lastly, it was agreed to pass a bill that no name should be placed on the roll of the Fortieth Congress of any State not represented in the present Congress. This drew forth more applause than ever.

Thus ended the real business of the caucus.
