

TERMS OF THE GLOBE. Per annum in advance $2.00. For 6 months 1.50. For 3 months 1.00. TERMS OF ADVERTISING. One square, 10 lines, for 1 week $1.00. Two squares, 10 lines, for 1 week $1.50. Three squares, 10 lines, for 1 week $2.00. One square, 10 lines, for 2 weeks $1.75. One square, 10 lines, for 3 weeks $2.00. One square, 10 lines, for 1 month $3.00. One square, 10 lines, for 2 months $5.00. One square, 10 lines, for 3 months $7.00. One square, 10 lines, for 6 months $12.00. One square, 10 lines, for 1 year $20.00. Professional and Business Cards not exceeding 10 lines. One year $2.00. Two years $3.50. Three years $5.00. Advertisements not made up to the number of lines desired, will be continued till the number is reached. One price for the printing of Blanks, Handbills, etc. are reasonably low.

The Globe

WM. LEWIS, HUGH LINDSAY, Publishers.

HUNTINGDON, PA., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17, 1867. NO. 41.

TERMS, $2.00 a year in advance.

THE "GLOBE JOB OFFICE" is the most complete of any in the country, and possesses the most ample facilities for promptly executing in the best style every variety of Job Printing, such as HAND BILLS, CIRCULARS, BILL HEADS, POSTERS, BALL TICKETS, PROGRAMMES, BLANKS, LABELS, &c., &c. CALL AND EXAMINE SPECIMENS OF WORK. LEWIS'S BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.
A subtle delicacy. Superior to any cologne used to perfume the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume the hair, to remove dandruff, and to obtain a soft and agreeable complexion. It is a favorite perfume of the aristocracy, and is sold by all druggists, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DeWitt's Dispensary, No. 21, Broadway, New York.

DR. R. R. WIESTLING most respectable. Daily renders his professional services to the citizens of Huntingdon and vicinity. Office at the late Dr. Snace, north 1-1/2.

DR. A. B. BRUMBAUGH, Having permanently located at Huntingdon, offers his professional services to the community. Office on Hill street, near door east of Court House. Aug. 25, '65.

DR. JOHN McCULLOCH, offers his professional services to the community. Office on Hill street, near door east of Court House. Aug. 25, '65.

R. ALLISON MILLER, DENTIST, Has removed to the Brick Row opposite the Court House, April 15, 1867.

J. E. GREENE, DENTIST, Has removed to opposite Franklin House in the old bank building, Hill street, Huntingdon, April 19, 1867.

S. T.—1860—X.
Persons of sedentary habits, troubled with weakness, lassitude, palpitation of the heart, loss of appetite, distress after eating, indigestion, constipation, &c., derive benefit from the celebrated PLANTATION BITTERS, which are warranted to produce an immediate medicinal effect. They are accordingly approved by the highest medical authorities, and are warranted to produce an immediate medicinal effect. They are accordingly approved by the highest medical authorities, and are warranted to produce an immediate medicinal effect.

MORRISON HOUSE, Huntingdon, Pa.
I HAVE purchased and entirely renovated the large stone and brick building opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot, and have now opened it for the reception of transient guests. The furniture, fixtures, beds and bedding are all entirely new and first class, and I am sure in saying that I can offer accommodations not excelled in any part of Pennsylvania. All refer to my patrons who have formerly known me while in charge of the Broad Run City Hotel and Jackson House, 1850-51.

E. W. THOMAS, Teacher of Cornet Bands, HUNTINGDON, PA.

K. ALLEN LOVELL, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

MILTON S. LITTLE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

R. McMURTRIE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

MATTREY & SIPE, ATTORNEYS AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

AGENCY, FOR COLLECTING SOLDIERS CLAIMS, BOUNTY, BACK PAY AND PENSIONS.

W. H. WOODS, Attorney at Law, Huntingdon, Pa.

JOHN BARE & CO., Bankers, Huntingdon, Pa.

IF YOU WANT A GOOD PHOTOGRAPH LIKENESS, CALL AT DONNELL & KLINE'S PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.

CHOICE CANDIES Of all kinds, for sale wholesale and retail at Lewis & Co's Family Grocery.

BEST BLEACHED M U S L I N Always on hand at CUNNINGHAM & CARMON'S.

SOAPS AND CANDLES. Superior Family of Pure Glycerine Soap—For Toilet, Bathing, Shaving, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity make it cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold every where at 50 cents per box. Ask for "Lion's" Pure Soap, No. 1, or No. 2.

SOUR PICKLES ready for the table in the doz., 1/2 doz., or 1/4 doz. for sale at Lewis & Co's Family Grocery.

CALL AT D. P. GWINN'S if you want GOOD GOODS.

THE HEART.
The heart—the heart, oh! prize it well For it is slender made; A cruel word, an angry look May cause its blood to fade. We may not know what hidden grief Lies deep within its core; Then do not add despair to that Which kindness may restore.

Billiousness.
With a greater amount of bile in the blood than is natural, the result is that the eyes and the skin begin to wear a yellow appearance, various other symptoms manifest themselves, according to the temperament, habits, and peculiarities of the individual; one has sick headache; another complains of want of appetite, sometimes loathing the very appearance of food; a third has cold feet and hands; a fourth has chilly sensations, involving the whole body, or running up and down the back; a fifth is costive; women are hysterical, and laugh, cry, or talk, while men are moody, peevish, or morose. Bile is naturally of a bright yellow color, but as a man becomes more bilious it grows darker, and is at length as black as tar, causing a state of mind which the old Romans called atillousness, a term meaning black; and the same is on the countenance, and the person is ill-natured and fretful, and full with everybody and everything; hence, when a man is cross he is bilious, and ought to be pitied, and at the same time to be made to take an emetic.

HELEN CRAIG.
BY MERRIE M.

EXCHANGE HOTEL.
THIS subscribers having leased this Hotel, lately occupied by Mr. McHenry, are prepared to accommodate strangers, travelers, and citizens in general on the most liberal terms. All refer to my patrons who have formerly known me while in charge of the Broad Run City Hotel and Jackson House, 1850-51.

Teacher of Cornet Bands, HUNTINGDON, PA.

K. ALLEN LOVELL, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

MILTON S. LITTLE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

R. McMURTRIE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

MATTREY & SIPE, ATTORNEYS AT LAW, HUNTINGDON, PA.

AGENCY, FOR COLLECTING SOLDIERS CLAIMS, BOUNTY, BACK PAY AND PENSIONS.

W. H. WOODS, Attorney at Law, Huntingdon, Pa.

JOHN BARE & CO., Bankers, Huntingdon, Pa.

IF YOU WANT A GOOD PHOTOGRAPH LIKENESS, CALL AT DONNELL & KLINE'S PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.

CHOICE CANDIES Of all kinds, for sale wholesale and retail at Lewis & Co's Family Grocery.

BEST BLEACHED M U S L I N Always on hand at CUNNINGHAM & CARMON'S.

SOAPS AND CANDLES. Superior Family of Pure Glycerine Soap—For Toilet, Bathing, Shaving, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity make it cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold every where at 50 cents per box. Ask for "Lion's" Pure Soap, No. 1, or No. 2.

SOUR PICKLES ready for the table in the doz., 1/2 doz., or 1/4 doz. for sale at Lewis & Co's Family Grocery.

CALL AT D. P. GWINN'S if you want GOOD GOODS.

A Child Eaten by Snakes.
In the early part of the month of August last, a girl named Eliza Drummond, about 11 years of age, whose parents live near West Monro, in this county, left home one morning for the purpose of picking berries, and never since returned. The most diligent search was made for her by the parents and neighbors, but no traces could be found. The event, which created a profound sensation at the time, had almost passed from the minds of all, save the stricken parents, when it was painfully recalled by a rook which occurred. On Tuesday last, five or six lads went out hunting in the vicinity, and during the day came upon a spot where a large number of black snakes were discovered and killed.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Billiousness.
With a greater amount of bile in the blood than is natural, the result is that the eyes and the skin begin to wear a yellow appearance, various other symptoms manifest themselves, according to the temperament, habits, and peculiarities of the individual; one has sick headache; another complains of want of appetite, sometimes loathing the very appearance of food; a third has cold feet and hands; a fourth has chilly sensations, involving the whole body, or running up and down the back; a fifth is costive; women are hysterical, and laugh, cry, or talk, while men are moody, peevish, or morose. Bile is naturally of a bright yellow color, but as a man becomes more bilious it grows darker, and is at length as black as tar, causing a state of mind which the old Romans called atillousness, a term meaning black; and the same is on the countenance, and the person is ill-natured and fretful, and full with everybody and everything; hence, when a man is cross he is bilious, and ought to be pitied, and at the same time to be made to take an emetic.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to Miss Gamble. After some months' attention he asked her hand in marriage; she replied—Mr. Wirt I have been well repaid of your attentions for some time back, and should have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield my assent, until you make a pledge never to taste, touch or handle any intoxicating drinks! This reply to Wirt was as unexpected as it was novel. His reply was that he considered the proposition as a bar to all further consideration on the subject, and he left her. Her course towards him was the same as ever—his resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again and solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indignant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor; and vowed it should be the last meeting they should ever have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin.

Charters by the Court.
The following Act has passed both branches of the Legislature and received the signature of the Governor: As will be seen, it enlarges the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Pleas, relative to granting charters of incorporation, and confirming those heretofore granted.

Reformation of William Wirt.
The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage, became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strongly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave the country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he rose to distinction. But his habits hung about and occasionally he was found with a jolly and frolicsome spirits and bacchanalian revelry. His true friends expostulated with him to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he persisted. His practice began to fall off and many looked on him as