THE INSANITY OF OFFICE HUNTING .---Greeley has some sound philosophy on this subject in the Tribune of the 1st instant, which we give to our readers. He says ;

Some of our readers will undoubtedly remember the menagerie man's description of an ambitious animal-"He can't live in the water and he dies on land;" and this is precisely the purgatorial position of a great many seekers for office in Washington. If the President smiles upon them, the Senate frowns; if they are distasteful to the White House, there can be no confirmation-and thus their money is expended and their patience exhausted, while the rays of hope vouchsafed to them are cold and scanty.

Under such distracting circum-stances, sensible men would pack their stances, sensible men would pack tkeir valises, pay their tavern bills if possi-ble, and return to their sweet homes without delay. Half the time and money, and ingenuity, often expended in fishing and fighting for a place of small perquisites, and less honor, would set these deluded geutlemen up in business, and keep them profitably in business, and keep them profitably going afterward. But there is a dis-fools of them and sends them upon a feverish chase after wild geese for the rest of their days.

If anything could cure them it would be the present dead-lock in Washington; but they are long past all chance of recovery. The lesson which they afford, we hope, will not be lost upon our youthful and more unsophisticated readers. A stero resolution at twenty-one, never to seek for place, but to wait for place to seek him, will be money in the pocket of any young man wise enough to make and firm enough to keep the wholesome vow.
