Economy of fuel and consumption of moke.-Jacob Green of Norristown. Pa., has invented a new and useful im provement in furnaces, consuming all noke and gas without chimneys; it economises sixty per cent of fuel, and is applicable to all kinds of furnaces for manufacturing purposes. The improvement consists in making furnaces adapted to purposes required, with closed ash pits, in which is introduced a blast of air to support combusing fuel it receives another equivalent which unites with the liberated hydrogen, carbonic oxyd, and other inflama line single insertion, counting seven mable gases, producing a clean intense words to a line.

important item in the manufacture or working iron, steel, copper, glass, &c. By Mr. Green's process of combusrequisite, which is under perfect control in all kinds of weather, the quantity of oxygen and steam necessary for ombustion being regulated by valves. This appears to be the most perfect plicable to all kinds of Furnaces, Kilns, Steamboats, &c., and renders chimneys or stocks useless. Iron can be made from ore with any kind of raw coal, and less than half the quantity used in ordinary furnaces, broken out among the cattle in differand of superior quality at not over fifteen per cent of the cost of constructing ordinary furnaces. The ore is desulphurized, deoxydized and carboniwas robbed of goods valued at about three hundred dollars. gas in the coal are decomposed and consumed before contact with the materials to be melted. Mr. Green's improvement in ash pits or cave beneath the grates and free passage around the pit, enable the firoman to keep the fire free from clinker, slate and ashes at all times, without drawing a grate bar to clean the fire box; thereby a regular heat can be maintained at all times; The Agricultural Society meets the steam passing between the grates this Tuesday evening, when the expediency of holding a County Fair will tates the einder, which is easily removed. community. A hundred different ru-mors were afloat, and the public mind was excited to the highest pitch. It was thought for a while that no invesligation would be made by the Coroner although it was strongly suspected that Mr. Young came to his death by foul means. On Saturday morning Coroner Widensall summoned a jury, and accom-panied by Drs. Landis, Smith, Hays renew their subscription through the mail or otherwise.

The facts elicited were briefly as follows: Mr. Young became suddenly ill after cating some cukes supposed to have contained poison, and also the other members of the family—his case was regarded of a more serious character than any of the others; he began to recover and was thought, by his physician, to be out of danger; he took a tion and construction of furnaces the relapse, and was again very ill—indiheat and flame are confined in the furnace, increasing heat without a corresponding increase offuel. Nothing is permitted to escape but the incombustible gasses; thus the furnace is completely filled with pressure heat to any degree requisite, which is under perfect concated a fresh and increased dose of poison; again arsonic. This appears to be the most perfect mode of combustion and economy of the deceased, by orders of Mrs. Young the deceased, by orders of Mrs. Young the deceased, by orders of the deceased, by orders or fuel and heat yet discovered. It is apwas the amount bought; the purpose for gent and experienced statesmen. It which it was bought was to kill rats. The arsenic was brought home and carefully placed in a drawer in Mr. Young's room, and the package never opened. After the "cake poisoning" the package was taken and burned—one of the family said it was Tuesday of last week, and another testified that Store, price $1.00. it was on some day of the week before, Dead rats were seen about the house: but they came to their death by a decoction of "Costar's rat exterminator," used for the purpose of "bating the rats ordrawing them on." The poison which was said to be in the cakes was mixed with some cream of tarter, in a bottle which was at once destroyed. The attending physician testified that death was the result of poison, all the symptoms of the disease went to show that more than one dose was administered and that he received evidently a dose on Thursday of which he died. Mrs. Young stated that she alone nursed her busband during his illness, and prepared his food.

The jury, after hearing all the testimony in the case, rendered a verdict that 'John Young came to his death by poison administered by some person or persons to the jury unknown.

On Monday evening information was made and a warrant issued for the arrest of Mrs. Young and her daughter Maria. The parties were permitted however, to remain at home, that they might have a hearing before his Honor Judge Taylor.

In a Tight place. Professor R. D. Hamilton, the horse tamer, well known in these parts, met with an incident in Chicago, which we deem worthy of publication: A grocer in that city bought a bay horse, which proved to be a vicious brute and quite unmanageable. Hav ing heard of the professor's feats in the way of horse taming, he brought the animal to the Coliseum for treatment.

At the close of the exhibition, and before the audience were dismissed, the vicious horse was brought into the arena, led by his owner, who appeared somewhat nervous, and accompanied by the horse subduer.

At this point the flooring gave way right above the cages where the lions are kept, and the horse fell through, carrying with him a number of the way. In falling through the aperture the horse stuck for a time, and was A. L. A gentleman rushed forward and plucked the urchin from his perilous position, push which sent him down to the floor beneath.

The horse tamer was about to com mence to manipulate the irritable brute, but before any result could be achieved, the latter made a sudden bound from the hands of his owner, who let go the bridle, and the horse sprang wildly into the circle, among the audience.
