He should be taught to mind, but rathknow when or how long he will obey you; but if from the farmer you may expect his obedience to last as long as the cause which produces it.

I am strongly opposed, both in principle and practice, to "breaking colts," that is, allowing them to attain the age of two or more years before they are taken in hand for learning the principles which so important a part in their future life. There should be no breaking about it. The education should begin as soon as the colt is born, and if perfectly attended to, will be perfect by the time he is large enough to drive.

Being led or tried with a halter should be the first lesson, and the sooner he learns it the shorter the struggle and the more permanent the consequence, the next season their lesson; never give him a chance postiverous seeds are scattered broadto break loose, for once done, and he cast over the farm with the manure, if the lesson be too often repeated, he weeds and a heavy outlay of labor is will make a proficient in this not de- the result. The outline of my plan may be thus bill. given: "As soon as the colt is weaned he should have good feed and be handled every day, if possible; he should be coaxed rather than made by force | be allowed to perfect their seeds unto do anything. Never use a switch disturbed." Constant cutting will desor the end of the halter strap. During the winter the colt should stand haltered the greater portion of the time, either in his stable or out in the open air—the latter for at least a comb and brush freely. Remember allow you to place light articles on his back without any resistance, and straps hanging loose about the body or heels. The education should be continued during the second winter, and by the time he is two years old he will quietly permit himself to be harness. ed up alongside of a quiet horse (his mother if possible) and driven about.

During the operation of halter breaking great care should be taken always to make him walk fast-fast walking should be a part of his education, and he will never forget it during his afterlife. I know of no colt which may not be made a good walker if properly trained when young, but this is a fast time, and walking is too slow to keep up with it .- Germantown Telegraph.

How Weeds are Propagated.

There are several sources from which farmers derive their weeds. One amongst the most prominent is the sowing of foul seeds, such as Clover, Timothy, or even garden seeds. Prof. Buckman discovered in a pint of common clover seed, 70, 100 weed seeds; I usually wean my colts at from in one pint of dutch clover, (white) four to five months old, according to 25,560 weed seeds, and in another pint the time of year. Many are, I ing only from reliable seedsmen, and think, too careless of their colts at or only seed of the very best quality. about the time they are weaned. As Second, and the better plan is, for evfar as my experience goes. I consider cry farmer to procure a number of this the most important time in the small sieves of different degrees of finecolt's life, as far as his future health, ness. If any of your readers are curisize and disposition are concerned. If ous to know how may foul seeds are he is then neglected as to food and contained in a peck of clover timothy care, he will probably show it during seed, let him procure a sieve that will the remainder of his life. If he is not not permit the clover or timothy seeds to pass through it, and another, which will just allow their passage. The fine sieve will allow the passage of seeds smaller than clover or timothy, and er through affection than through fear; the coarse one will retain those which if the latter is the cause, you never are larger. I have made many experiments of this kind, and even in what appeared to be the primest seed, invariably found enough weed seeds to foul any farm on which they would be sown. The same plan should be adopted with garden seeds. The saving in a single season will repay the outlay for sieves more than four fold, and in some cases a hundred fold.

Again, the dunghill is another prolific source of weeds on a farm. Many farmers are in the habit of throwing all the weeds they collect about their farms upon the dunghills. This is an excellent and economic practice, provided they are cut before they have gono to seed. But, unfortunately, weed cutting and gathering is rarely done while the weeds are green, and, as a will remember it for a long time, and and, as is to be expected, a harvest of has ripened its seeds upon the dung-

Let every farmer who desires clean grounds and profitable returns adopt the fixed rule, that "No weeds shall Briars and other bushes, if cut at the season referred to, will soon disappear; and if weedy portions of the farm are mowed or hoed before the plants mature their seeds the result must be their complete cradication .- Hammonton Culturist.

This explains why in a given region winter wheat may be too unreliable to grow with profit, while both to the north and to the south of this region the crop is reliable and profitable.
