HUNTING DON, PA.

Slovenly Farmers. In a recent ride into the country, we were forcibly reminded that the race of slevenly farmers is not wholly extinct. In one field, half buried in the snow, we saw a plow; in another, a cultivator; in another, a barrow; and in still another, a reaping machine, ap parently new last summer; all probably suffering greater injury from their winter's exposure, than from their summer's wear. Again, we noticed gates broken down, or hanging by a single hinge; boards off the sides of the barn, which were admitting the wind to tear off other boards, when a few minutes with hammer and nails, would have repaired them, and pre vented further damage. Old wagons and sleds seattered about the barnyard, or in some cases where the barr intruding the highway. All these are indications of slovenly farmers who have either neglected to prepare sufficient storage for their implements, or have carelessly neglected to house them, and are thus allowing them to decay rapidly under the wear of the elements. We are aware that this class of farmers have been ridiculed, caricatured, and remonstrated with by the agricultural press for the last thirty years, and we believe with good effect, but still their number is altogether too great, and we would attempt a little more exhortation.

opened directly into the road, were

The first requisite to the careful storing of the implements of the farm, is to have a convenient tool house, convepient in location as well as construction. Many a tool house is well arranged, but so located that the workmen cannot put their tools therein without going considerably out of their way, and that they are not inclined to do, and consequently leave them out in the weather. As most of the barn yard doors open directly, or indirectly into the fields, the tool house should be located on one side thereof, nearest the gate which communicates with the greatest number of fields. It should be much longer one way thon the other, and have sliding doors at either end, and a passage wide enough for a a wagon to pass through it along one side, so that when a laborer brings his plow, harrow, cultivator, &c., from the field, he can drive them directly into the tool house; and it not intending to use them the next day, they could be left upon the stone boat or wagon, and the team driven out the other end. A portion of the tool house should be assigned to the hand implements.

Such a tool house having been provided, it ought to be an imperative rule that every laborer place his implement in its proper place, whenever, the day's work is done. There would probably be some difficulty in executing such an ordinance at first; but if persisted in, the proprietor always setting the example, it would soon become a habit. To facilitate the housing of the heavier implements, a light stone boat should be provided for every work team, upon which the plow, harrow, cultivator, or other horse implement can be easily loaded (and as easi ly unloaded) and drawn to and from the field.

What adds more to the serenity of the farmer, when he goes in from his labor at night, he is gathered with his family around his cheerful fireside to know that all is order! .No tools exposed to rust and decay-no doors or gates swinging-no loose boards clattering on the buildings, everything in its place. We know that it is very difficult to change the life-long habits of an invetorate sloven, but they can be improved, and we appeal to the sons of such to avoid the habits of the parent, and even go around and restore order after him, and they may even without his co-operation, bring about such a change in favor of neatness and order, as to greatly increase the attractions of the old homestead.

A slovenly farmer is seldom a good farmer, never an economical one. H he cultivates his land thoroughly, he does not save all of its products. Much is destroyed by cattle or awine, which enter the fields through gates left open, bars left down, or a broken down fence, not promptly repaired; and after the crops are in the barn, the stock are getting in, or the rain and snow beat in where boards or shingles are off. Many dollars are annually lost in these ways, which an orderly farmer would save. The pecuniary losses suffered, are nothing compared with the loss of temper, of happiness, through the worrying, fretting, and harrassing of body and mind.

How our landscape is disfigured by the home of the sloven, as above described; and how it is adorned by the neat, attractive home of the orderly farmer, with its well painted and well preserved dwelling and outbuildings, its lawn and garden, filled with ornamental trees, shrubs, flowers, fruits, and vegetables, enclosed by neat, painted fonces, gates latched and on their hinges, and everything in good repair! Farmers! build up such homesteads as shall ever be the cynosure to the hearts of your children which they shall leave with reluctance, and to which they shall return with joy !--Country Gentleman.

PROF. . H. M'ENTYRE'S GREAT REMEDY.

Internal and External Medicine

WILL CURE: 193 Diarrhea, Bloody Flux in one day, 193 Headache and Larache in three minutes. 193 Toothache in one minute. 193 Neuralgia in five minutes,

25 Sprains in twenty minutes. Soro Throat in ten minutes,

All Rheumatism in one day, en Bad Coughs or Colds in one day, the Fever and Ague in one day, the Cures Deafness, Asthma, Piles, 123. Bronchitis Affections, Dyspepsia, 13. Liver Complaint and Palpitation of the Heart. Keep it in your Families -- Sickness comes when least expected.

I propose to check, and effectually dissipate more ache and pain, and to accomplish more perfect equilibrium of all the circulating fluids in the human system, than can be effected by any other, or all other methods of medical aid in the same space of time.

THIS POPULAR REMEDY is fast coming into use, for the fact that I cure, tree of charge, all these complaints whenever there is an opportunity to do so. As soon as it is applied it almost mirreculously kills the pain. I do not ask you to buy before you are certain of its efficiency. Hyou have an acheer pain, it is warranted to do all it purports on the label.

I do not propose to cure cery disease—only a class at it purports on the label.

I do not propose to cure every disease—only a class named by my directions. My liniment operates on chemical and electric principles, and is, therefore, appliable, to the cure or natural restorative of all organic derangement arising from an improper circulation of the nerve vital fluids.

Prof. J. H. McEntyre's INDIAN COMPOUND acts directly on the absorbents, reducing glandular and other swellings in incredible short time, without any possible danger from its use under any possible circumstances.

This is an internal and external medicine—composed of posts bere and backs such as one forest there wed This is an internal and external medicine—composed of roots, herbs and barks, such as our forefathers used.—
There is a bountiful supply on earth to care all complaints if we only know what they were.

This has been a great study with the Medical Faculty for many years, to find out the kinds best adapted to the above complaints—how to put them together, and what proportions to use.

Size and Plan of the Marriage Certificate,

The size of the Certificate is 10 by 14 inches. It contains a beautiful figure representing the union of two hearts. Above the figure is written in beautifully ornamented Gorman Text the words "thotograph Marriage Certificate." There are three spaces in the figure; on the space in the center the Certificate paper is written. The words, "two hearts in one" form an erch over the Certificate proper, and immediately under the arch there is a beautiful figure representing the joding of hands, and where the centre race comes to a point there is a picture of two beautiful treffs does. On the space to the left there is a place for the photograph of the centreman and under it we have the words, "To the fineband." in ornamental text, under which we have selections of Scripture passages addressed to the landshand. On the left side of the Wife." In ornamental text, under which is a place for the theory appropriate passages of Scripture and treated on the order of the wife. The ornamental text, under which are appropriate passages of Scripture and treated to the wife. Over the space for the photograph of gentleman we have written in Old English characters, the following appropriate passages of Scripture: "It is not goal that the man should be alone," and over the space of the photograph of the photograph of the figure of the hearts, we have the hearts bound together or eneircled in part by these words: "What therefore God hath Joined together let in man put assumder." TO THE LADIES.—Do you really intend to cease wearing the beautiful styles now so provalent, or dress less elegantly, because the robel Joff. Davis, was captured in Pashionable Femala attire? One moment's calm reflection will surely serve to change your rash resolve. The angels had too much good sense to lay aside their pure chaste robes of white, because they had for a time served to hide the deformities of that Prince of Rebels, the Devil. Can you err in following the
