HUNTINGDON, PA. When the Leaves are turning

> BROWN. BY MRS, ELIZABETH AKERS.

Never is my heart so gay In the budding month of May, Never does it beat a tune Half so sweet in blooming June, Never knows such happiness
As on such a day as this.
When October dons her crown, And the leaves are turning brown,

Breathe, sweet children, soft regrets For the vanished violets; Sing you lovers, the delights Of the golden Summer nights; Never in the Summer hours On my way such radiance showers
As from heaven falls softly down,
When the leaves are turning brown!

Braid your girdles, fresh and gay, Ghildren in the bloom of May;
Twist your chaplets in young June,
Maidens—they will fade full soon;
Twine ripe roses, July—red,
Lovers, for the dear one's head; I will weave my richer crown When the leaves are turning brown

THE PEDLER'S STORY.

A cold winter's night, several years since, found a stage load of passengers gathered together around the warm ireofa tavern bar-room ina New England village. Shortly after we arrived a pedler drove up and ordered that his horse should be stabled for the

After we had eaten supper, we repaired to the bar-room, where the conversation flowed freely. Several ancedotes had been related, and finally the pedlar was asked to give us a story, as puch of his profession were generally full of adventures and anecdotes. He was a short, thick set man, somewhere about forty years of age and gave evidence of great physical strength. He gave his name as Lemuel Vinney, and nis home was in Dover, New Hamp-

Now I wanted to be in Jackson the next morning, for I expected a load of goods there for me which I intended to dispose of on my way home. "The moon would rise about midnight, and I knew if it did not rain I could get along through the mud very well after that. So I asked the landlord if he would see that my horse was fed about midnight, as I wished to be off at about two. He expressed some surprise, and asked me why I did not stop for breakfast. I told him that I had sold my last load about out and that a new lot of goods was waiting for me at Jackson, and I wanted there be fore the expressagent left in the morn
