Fairy Story for Little Ones.

Prince Procrastination was always about to seek his fortune, but then he was long in starting. So at last his fairy godmother said to him:
"I have planted a rose in the garden. It will bear only one bud. you pick this bud before it is fairly ppened, you will find in it a dewdrop.

The Prince who was very anxious about his fortune, thanked his god-mother warmly, and did little else but watch the rose till, it budded. Just before the bud had opened, he plucked it, and found in it the dewdrop, as hard as steel; and looking in this curious mirror, he saw a castle; and over the gate of this eastle hung a banner; and on the banner was written: "Who grasps me first shall lead the king's

"This is easily done," said the Prince; "but where is this castle?" again he saw the word "Mansonia."
"Where can Mansonia be?" thought the Prince, "I must buy an atlas. I will go to town to-day and buy one." But that day it happened that the Prince had a headache. So he said:
"I will go the next day."
So the next day he went; but just as he was going into the book store, he saw a man with some tiny white puppies. So he said: "I will go and look at the puppies, and stop for the atlas on my way back." But when he got back to the book store, they had just sold the last atlus. "Nover mind," said the man, "we

"This is a better gift than the other," thought the Prince, and every day he used to go and look at the pear, and wonder how it would taste, and why it could make him wise, till it had grown so full and rich that were fighting about, that he went to watch them. When he came back he met his little brother coming down the ladder. "Oh, Pro! you ought to go up and eat some of those pears. I got a plendid one."

"Splendid one! which one?" shouted the Prince. "Why, the one at the very topthe big one! Never tasted such a one in mv life!"

"I wish it had choked you," answered the Prince in a fury; this made sure? comes of having a younger brother.-However, I have one more chance

So he looked in the mirror again, and this time he saw only a line of writing, and this is what it said: "Catch the third fish from the sea,

And you yes may lucky be." "Well, there is no such hurry about this, anyhow," thought the Prince,-I can catch three fishes any time. However, I will go to-morrow.' But to-morrow the Prince's cousin came to see him; and on the next day he sprained his ankle; and on the third day he was reading a book. Then he found that he had no not -Then he forgot to send to town for a net. When he did send, it came home late at night, and the next day it rained.
