A LEAP YEAR LAMENT.

Bother! 'tis leap year, boys, Awful to think of it;

Will to think of it;
Ruin is yawning, boys,
We're on the brink of it;
Victims to woman's schemes,
Each of us, all of us,
Sure as we're living, boys,
They'll be the fall of us.

Bachelors, young and old;
Maidens are planning, boys.
Nothing their tongues can hold,
Planning all serts of things—
Awful to think of it!

Ruin approaches, boys, We're on the brink of it!

Confound the girls, I say, Tyrants the whole of them-

Binding us wretches, boys,
To the control of them;
Shy of the witches, boys,

For we are weak, you know, Worst of it they know it—

Shame I must speak it so!

Popping the question, boys, That's what they'll do to us,

If we but give the plagues
Half a side view of us;

A home without a girl in it is only half blest; it is an orehard without blessoms and a Spring without song. A house full of sons is like Lebanor with its cedars, but daughters by the fireside are like the roses in Sharon.' There are young men in our town who think the latter idea in the last sentence is "just about the thing." -The Greencastle Valley Echo gives the following ludierous incident as occuring in that place. A quarterly meeting was going on in one of the churches, and a lady member resolved to have her four year old boy baptized The time for the ceremony as she proceeded to the altar with her bright, laughing cherub in her arms. By the usual form, the minister proceeded to baptise "young hopeful" in the name of the "Father, Son and Hely Ghost," when he suddenly threw himself back in his mother's arms, exclaim mother's face flushed, a visible smile lit up the minister's countenance, and the congregation "snickered" Child-like, he saw the sensation he had created, and joined in the merriment. -A lady in Rhineback was recently reading to her child-a boy of sev. en years of age—a story of a little fellow whose father was taken ill and died; whereupon the youngster se himself diligently to work to assist in supporting himself and his mother. When she had finished the story, the following dialogue ensued: Mother—Now, my little man, if pa was to die, weuldn't you work to help your mother? Boy—(Not relishing the idea of work.)—Why ma, what for? Ain't we got a good house to live in?

Mother—O, yes, my child; but we can't eat the house, you know.

Boy—Well ain't we got flour, and sugar, and other things, in the store-Mother-Certainly we have, my dear, but they will not last long; and what:then?

Boy-Well, ma, ain't there onough o last until you can get another husband?

A roar of laughter ended the colle-
