On Saturday night last, some individuals, who were provided with forentered the office of Dr. R. Wiestling, in this place, and creeping stealthily into the side room where he was sleep-ing, took his clothing, together with his pocket book, containing about twenty dollars. The first intimation he had of being robbed was on arising the next morning, and seeing his of-fice door open, and his clothes scattered along the street.

Not satisfied with this haul the thieves went down street and entered the residence of Mr. J. Simpson Africa in the same manner, going into his of-fice first, and then boldly entering his bed-room, and stealing his pants, also. They found about twenty dollars in his pocket book, and the next morning Mr. A. was left minus purse and pants.

The party then went down street further, no doubt trying the doors along the way, and effected an ontrance in the residence of Theo. Cremer, Esq., but one of the children being sick and seeing a light in the bed room, the thieves departed with no game.

COMMUNICATED.

The use of the word commencement as a name for the closing exercises in an educational institution sounds decidedly awkward thief's chances for heaven are very slim.

On Saturday night a party were discovered by W. II. Woods, Esq., on his promises, but they made their escape before detection. It is supposed speakers and writers and we must submit.

It was our privilege to be present at the commencement at the close of the session of this institution on Tuesday and Wednesday the 23d and 24th inst. The programme for the first day consisted of Recitations, Phsiology, Moral Science, Latin, and the several branches of Mathematics, in all of which the young ladies gave evidence of thorough cul-ture. The second day was devoted to Botany, Butler's Analogy, English literature, vo-cal and instrumental music, reading of essays and conferring diplomas upon the graduates.
The graduates were Miss Libbie Barnhard of Huntingdon, Miss Mary E. Candor of Lowistown, and Miss Bettie Black of Pittsburgh. Miss Candor read an essay on "Gems from Whittier;" Miss Barnhart on "Individualism;" and Miss Black on "Nature." The essays were creditable productions, replete with good thoughts well expressed, and were read with perfect compo-sure and grace, although a little more clevasure and grace, atthough a little more dieva-tion of the voice would have produced a bet-ter modulation of the tone. The same defect of elecution was painfully exhibited by some of the students in quotations from Milton, Tonnyson, and other English authors. In Botany the young ladies were perfectly at home, analyzing almost every species of the vegetable kingdom indigenous to this cli-mate, showing their properties, habits and distinctive characteristics with perfect ease, thus making it a pleasant and profitable ex-orcise for pupils and patrons who were pre-sent. This locality affords most excellent facilities for the promotion of this study—the surrounding hills, precipitous rocks, shady dells, native forests, and mountain streams, produce every variety of wild flower and vegetable of this climate. Prof. Grier has collected a cabinet of rare and beautiful specimens of minorals, shells, corals and preserved insects from almost every part of the world, to which is added a collection of idels and other Chinese curiositics, presented to the institution by Dr. Hap-per, missionary to China. This cubinet, of itself, affords a prolific source of thought to the student of natural history. One of the interesting features of this intellectual entertainment was the display of wax fruit and flowers—the work of the students in that department during last session. Almost every variety of native and tropical ruit and flowers were represented and with a fathfulness to nature which created and with a fathfulness to nature which created a strong desire to "pluck and eat."

The location of this institution is calculated to bring out the better traits of human character, and Prof. Grier does not fail to embrace the advantage thus afforded him in shaping the morale of the institution. Pure water, mountain breezes, and a temperate people make it one of the most healthful le-cations in the State.
