THE MEETING-PLACE. The ransomed of love shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.

Where the faded flower shall freshen— Freshen never more to fade; Where the shaded sky shall brighten— Brighten never more to shade.

Where the sun blaze never scorches— Where the stars beams cease to chill; Where no tempest stirs the echoes Of the wood, or wave, or hill;

Where the moon shall wake in gladness, And the moon the joy prolong; Where the daylight dies in fragrance, 'Mid the hazy of holy song—

Where no shadow shall bewilder; Where life's vain parade is o'er; Where the sleep of sin is broken, And the dreamer dreams no more;

Where no bond is broken, Partings, claspings, sob, and moan, Midnight wailing, twilight weeping, Heavy nightingales—no more.

Where earth's barren vale shall flourish, Where the child's rattle shall be heard; Where dear families are gathered That were scattered on the wild—

Where a blasted world shall brighten, Underneath a bluer aether, And a softer, gentler sunshine Shed its healing splendour;

Where earth's barren vale shall flourish, Where the child's rattle shall be heard; Where dear families are gathered That were scattered on the wild—

And right feeling, will readily comprehend how much of happiness is involved in your prudential ideas.

man who loves a man well enough to marry him, will cheerfully accommodate himself to his circumstances.

"Accommodate!" said the young man curling his lips. "I don't like the word. It hurts my pride."

"Pride is never a good counsellor, friend George."

"My manhood, then. It hurts my manhood. A young woman without a dollar in the world, 'accommodate' herself to the circumstances of a young man whose income is twelve hundred a year!

"No, sir," was firmly answered—"Even as I talk with you, and listen to what you say, I grow more resolute in my purpose to recede from a dangerous position."

It was noticed among the friends of Mr. George Lano that, for some cause unknown to them, a somber hue had fallen on his thoughts.

He was not infrequently, and correctly, arrows from a pair of bright eyes had wound him, and the pain would not abatement night or day.

And the pain found no abatement night or day? None! George Lano was no blind lover, ready to risk all consequences in pursuit of any object.

Twenty-two years since they were first introduced into the country from Germany, and have since been used by millions of people.

thoughtless enough for sixteen. People and things were talked about with a flippancy and freedom neither charitable nor delicate.

Among other subjects, the marriage of a friend was discussed, and the well or ill of the case settled in a manner that made my case burn."

"I never thought Amy the simplest to get married in that mean sort of a way," remarked the young lady.

"She must have wanted a husband! If a man cannot do better by me than that, I'd advise him to give my door a wide berth."

"Nellie laughed at her friend, and returned a few assenting words that struck me to the quick."

"Thoughtlessly said, George," remarked his friend. "You take too seriously the light speeches of girls, who often do so without thinking, just to hear themselves talk."

"If it were jesting," answered Lano, "the subject was unfortunate at the time. But this was not all. My ears were quick; and I took in every intimation of voice."

"No, sir," was firmly answered—"Even as I talk with you, and listen to what you say, I grow more resolute in my purpose to recede from a dangerous position."

THE PRINTER'S ESTATE.—The printer's dollars—where are they? A dollar here, and a dollar there, scattered over numerous small towns all over the country, miles and miles apart—how shall they be gathered together?

The printer maker, the building owner, the journeyman compositor, the grocer, the tailor, and his assistants to him in carrying on his business, have their eyes turned to the printer who has to get up an address to those widely scattered dollars something like the following:

"Dollars, halves, quarters, dimes, and all manner of fractions into which you are to collect yourselves, and come home! Ye are wanted! Collect yourselves; for valuable as you are in the aggregate, single you will cover pay the cost of gathering."

Come in here, in single file, that the printer may form you into battalions, and send you forth again, to battle for him and vindicate his credit."

Kind reader, are you sure you have not a couple of the printer's dollars sticking about your "old clothes"?

A SIGHT MISTAKE.—In a New Hampshire town there lived an ignorant, irreligious, worthless fellow, by the name of Ramsom, no member of any church, and no man of any worth within the "memory of the oldest inhabitant."

The village pastor, after years of failure, had at length "almost persuaded" two of the younger sons to promise attendance for one Sabbath; but the fear that they would be the subject of some personal remarks still deterred them.

They were in great terror lest they should be publicly upbraided for their misdoings, and called to account for their wickedness. After much agonizing their fears were quieted, and on the following Sunday the eyes of the good pastor's congregation were astonished at the unwonted presence of the aforesaid Ramsoms.

All went well until the reading of the second hymn, which was the familiar "Bless ye the trumpet, blow." Immediately the effect waned, at the end of the line, "Return ye ransomed sinners home," the elder of our heroes seized his hat, and, with long strides towards the door, shouted, "Come along home, Bill! I knowed they'd be dingin' it at us if we came here!"—N. H. paper.

SHE NEVER LEAVES HIM.—Look at the career of a man as he passes through the world, and you will find him to be a man of many ups and downs. How often is he left by his followers to sink under the weight of his afflictions, unheeded and alone!

One friend of his own sex forgets him; another abandons him, a third, perhaps, betrays him; but faithful woman follows him in his afflictions with unshaken affection; braves the changes of feeling, of his temper, embittered by the disappointments of the world, with the highest of all virtues; in resigned patience ministers to his wants, and when her own misery and distress remains one act of love, duty, or compassion to be performed. And at last, when life and sorrow come to an end, she follows him to the tomb with an ardor of affection which death itself cannot destroy.

Mr. A. R. Hope has written a book about boys, in which he says some good things. He begins by classifying boys, and here are a couple of the classes: "1. Young gentlemen—I shudder as I pen the disgusting name. You know what I mean?—the beardless beings who wish to be thought men and dandies, and to that end smoke, swear, and swagger with more or less impunity. If you go out into the streets on a Saturday afternoon you will see hundreds of them, whom you would like to take between your finger and thumb, and drop quietly into the water."

"2. A large and increasing class, I venture to say, though I would speak tenderly of them, that their degradation is often caused by circumstances over which neither they nor the control of writers and teachers have any control; viz: fond and foolish mothers, who will make them wear comforters and gossamers, and keep them in the house when it is cold, and encourage them to cry when they are hurt."

"MAKE THE BEST OF IT."—A determination to make the best of every thing is a wonderful mother of the virtues which bestow a happy and profitable scene. In Peter Pindar's story of the "Pilgrims and the Peas," two fellows upon whom the pittance of walking to a certain shrine with rags upon their backs, had been enjoined their tasks under very different circumstances, and in very different moods. One of them having taken the precaution to soften his peas, by boiling them, tripped lightly and merrily over the ground; the other, who had not gumption enough to turn his hard pellets into a poultice by the same process, limped and howled all the way. It is pretty much the same in our pilgrimages through the trials of life. The impatient and imprudent travel on hard peas, the prudent and sagacious make themselves easy in their shoes, and run cheerfully the race that is set before them.
