Gough's Apostrophe to Cold Water. The celebrated apostrophe to water given in one of John B. Gough's temperance lectures is a gem. It is said to have originated with a Texas Baptist preacher. It is somewhat modified as used by Mr. Gough, Pouring a goblet of water and advancing to wards his audience, and lifting it above his head, he said:

"Look at that, ye thirsty ones of earth! Behold it! Behold its purity! How it glitters, as if a mass of liquid gems! It is a beverage that was brewed by the hand of the Almighty himself! Not in simmering still or smoking fires, choked with poisonous gases and surrounded by the stenches of sickening colors and rank corrup-tion, does our Father in Heaven prepare the precious essence of ; life-the pure cold water; but in the green glade and grassy dell, where the deer wanders and the child loves to play; there God brews it; and down in the deep valleys, where the fountains murmur and the rills sing, and high upon the mountain tops, where the storm clouds brood and the thunders crash; and away far out on the wide sea where hurricane howls music and the big waves, roll, the chorus, sweeping the march of God—there he brews it—that beverage of life—health giving water —and everywhere it is a thing of beauty; glimmering in the dew drop, singng in the summer rain, shining in the ice gem-till the trees all seemed turned into living jewels; spreading a golden veil over the setting sun or a white gauze around the midnight moon, sporting in the cataract, sleeping in the glaciers, dancing in the hall show-er; folding its bright curtain softly about a windy world, and weaving the many colored iris, that seraph's zone of the sky, whose warp is the rain drops of earth, whose woof is the sunbeam of heaven; all checkered over with celestial flowers by the mystic hand of reflection, still always it is beautiful, that blessed life water. No West Huntingdon Foundry. poison bubbles on the brink; its foam brings no sådness er murder!

"THAT'S VERY ODD."—A gentleman was recounting his travels one evening after dinner, to a friend, and commenced in this way:was attacked while crossing a forest by a pack of twelve wolves; and from my postchaise window I fired my re volver and killed the first wolf, and strange to say, his companions stop-ped and devoured him, and then came on again to the fight. I shot another, and my postillion killed a third, both of which were devoured, and so we went on until one wolf remained; and I killed him as we were entering the mensely fat. He, of course, had devoured all his companions.' "Dear me," said his friend, "that's very odd." said the traveller: "but not nearly so odd as that which hap pened on the following day. I was out shooting antelopes, and fired at one as he stood on the top of a crag, and odd to say, the ball passed thro'

The report of my rifle that our work has given entire satisfaction to our customers, to whom, we tender our thanks. We have in our employ one of the best millers in the country, and afaithful and capable engineer. Thus equip ped and encouraged, we are determined to persevere in our efforts to accommodate and please the public, hoping thereby to merit and receive a liberal share of patronage to sustain us in our enterprise for the public interest.

refuge in a hollow tree, and to my horror, I descended into a nest of young bears, where I had not been long, when I heard a strange tapping, unmistakable signs of the return of the she-bear. She ascended the tree, and was descending the hollow. With the rapidity of lightning, I seized her tail and plunged my hunting knife into her haunches; upon which she started upwards, dragging me with her; and she went on one side of the tree and I escaped by the other." "Now, really, that's very odd," said the friend, "for it's the first time in my life I ever heard of a bear with a "Yes," replied the traveller, "and it was the only time I ever met with one, and that's very odd."

"Yes," replied the traveller, "and Thankin for pust patronage, the same. Huntingdon, Oct. 28, 1867.

SWIMMING UNDER THE ICE.-Muskrats have a curious method of traveling long distances under the ice. In their winter excursions to their feeding grounds, which are frequently at great distances from their abodes they take in breath at starting, and remain NOW under water as long as they can. They then rise up to the ice, and breathe out the air in their lungs, which remains in bubbles against the lower surface of the ice. They wait till the air recovers oxygen from the water and ice, and then take it again, and length of time under the ice. The hunter sometimes takes advantage of this habit of the muskrat in the following manner: When the marches and ponds where the muskrats abound at first frozen over and the ice is thin and clear, on striking into their bouses with his batchet for the purpose of setting his traps, he frequently sees a After the animal has breathed against | In this case he drowns in swimming | or country. Probably nover before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through along series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual needy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be rovided with this anidate for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed sottled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Oharry fisteders of the Lingte is its mastery the most obstinate of them, yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.
