HOOPLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS

The Patient Always the Rarest.
That which we call the rarest,
And prize for its surpassing worth,
Is always rarest.
Iron is heaped in mountain piles,
And glazes the highest forges;
But gold flakes gleam in dim delfs,
And lonely gorges.

THE GLOBE.

And then, in glowing language, of the graceful minarets, feathery palms and grand and solemn pyramids, and while listening she seemed to smile with him the dangerous passes of the Alps, and the dizzy heights crowned with ice and snow.

The Globe.

Mira, the "Marble-Hearted."
"Who is that beautiful girl, yonder—the one dancing with Leslie? Do you know her, Paul?"
The young man addressed as Paul raised his eyes and looked long and steadily at the young girl and replied: "That is Mira Swan, the Marble-Hearted."

Mira, the "Marble-Hearted."
"Who is that beautiful girl, yonder—the one dancing with Leslie? Do you know her, Paul?"
The young man addressed as Paul raised his eyes and looked long and steadily at the young girl and replied: "That is Mira Swan, the Marble-Hearted."

Warren Dagon smiled and said: "Please introduce me, Paul. I like her appearance but I am a stranger to all present. Ten years in foreign lands renders one a stranger to his family; any way I am a stranger here."

"I will introduce you with pleasure," but I caution you, and kindly admonish you against loving her; for remember, she is marble, and your heart will have to pay for it if you do."

"I am not a marble," said Paul, "but I will introduce you with pleasure, and kindly admonish you against loving her; for remember, she is marble, and your heart will have to pay for it if you do."

Warren Dagon was introduced, and was soon floating with her through the intricate mazes of the dance. He paid her the most assiduous attention throughout the evening. Mira knew him by report to be a gentleman of unbounded wealth and extensive travel.

Mira, sister, this is death. My weary feet are even now treading the brink of the river that rolls between the other world and this. I do not fear to die; 'tis joy unutterable to know that I am almost home. Poor Alwile! I shall soon meet him again. The morning of his life was very fair, giving promise of a long and useful day; but his sun went down in darkness before it had reached the meridian, and his own hand hastened its untimely setting. I trust I may find him in the land to which I am going. Mira, promise me that you will never marry a man who is not strictly temperate, for intemperance is the foundation of misery. Think how many bright hopes are made desolate by it. Fathers and mothers go down in sorrow to the grave, and wives and little children are made to suffer more than death by intemperance. O, Mira, I would rather have you die now, while your heart is pure and free from sorrow, than have you live, and in the long years to come find misery and weep in a drunkard's arms. Remember, Alwile, and promise me that I will be true to you. I promised, and may Heaven help me to keep my secret! I replied— She smiled and whispered, "I am going to sleep; good night, dear sister. It was a very long day, the morning star, Elsie, my beautiful sister, had gone to meet her God."
