COMMUNICATED. Messrs. Editors : I am not a little surprized to see the position you have taken in regard to one of the resolutions passed by the State Temperance Convention, assembled at Harrisburg last week. You certainly must have written that article from an erroneous view of the design of the resolution. I feel satisfied that you could not have looked at it after hastily writing it for the press. May I not ask you then to review the matter cana Tomperance plank is put into the platform ost of Temperance men It is possible that few persons who have lost all sonse of moral virtue and sobriety, might cease to vote and earnestness, and we believe his forwith the party; but are there not thousands eign policy will be firm and straitforwho have never voted with the Republican party, who, if temperance were made an is-sue, would rise above all partisan considerations, and at once identify themselves with the party of reform and progress. The only possible way they could injure the Republi-can party would be in the event that that party should close its eyes to the progressive recognition as a belligerent power.

Cespedes already has an agent in this to remain in power for what it has done instend of securing greater power by doing greater good. The following short biographical sketches of the members composing President Grant's Cabinet, will be interesting to our readers:

The Secretary of State. Hon. Hamilton Fish, the new Secretary of State, is sixty years of age, having been born in New York City not ask you then to review the matter candidly. You say "we protest against the blow aimed at the Republican party, by the above resolution, for every, intelligent man knows that aime tenths of the Temperanee men belong to the Republican party." I admit that the resolution contemplates making temperance a prominent plank in the political platform in the future, but how that can he "a blow at the Republican party" I contains in 1851 to 1851 to 1851 to 1851 to 1852 to 1852 to 1853 to bar in 1830. On New Orleans. cal platform in the future, but how that can be "a blow at the Republican party" I confess I do not understand. Is the Republican party a party of drunkards? Are they as a party, advocates of drunkenness? Is the free and unrestricted manufacture and sale of spiritusus liquors a vital principle in their creed? If not, then how can it be "a blow at the Republican party?" You say "if the Democrats can divide and distract our party by making an issue of temperance, they will does, and ride into power through our folly,"

But how can they "divide and distract" our party with theis issue? A precedent for action in this case is easily found. Fort Sumpter was fired on about the middle of April, 1861, and about the middle of June—in less than content of the British Lion? But twenty four went to Paris, where he remained several years and completed is no more king now than Cotton claimed to be few years ago.
