The Office Seeker, The following is from an old story, by J. K. Paulding, the novelist.

Why, any, I'm not very particular, but somehow or other, I think I should be a minister of the Gospel.

Why, y-y, answered the apple-headed man, "I wouldn't much care if I was a minister of the Gospel."

Why, y-y, yes, don't care if I was a minister of the Gospel, or a Surveyorship, or Naval Agency, or Postal Agency, or anything of that sort.

Why, y-y, said the Secretary, "I regret exceedingly that not only all these places, but every other place of consequence in the Government is at present occupied."

Why, y-y, said the Secretary, "I regret exceedingly that not only all these places, but every other place of consequence in the Government is at present occupied."

have joyfully entered into the kingdom of grace, and are delightfully employed in preparation for the kingdom of glory.

We now see this work so progressive as to be a sure earnest of final and perfect victory, when Jesus Christ shall reign universal King in heaven and earth.

We have only to glance at ancient or modern history to discover the fallacy of unaided reason to direct the lost sons and daughters of Adam into the paths of either truth or happiness.

But on the contrary we have seen that many an oasis has been opened in the moral wastes of earth, so watered by divine truth, as to give to the joyful and peaceable fruit of righteousness to all the inhabitants; and we have seen here and there in the midst of moral darkness, a spot of natural verdure, made such by our Bible, upon which the eye loves to linger, when human philosophy had labored in vain for thousands of years.

But our telescope is not only retrospective—it has also prospective powers; and now let us turn it upon the dark vista of the future, which has ever defied the unaided human eye.

But here, time and space and power would fail, to describe the ecstasy of patriarchs, prophets and apostles, when with this wondrous lens at their eyes looking into the distant and glorious future, they beheld the Redeemer's kingdom upon earth, its perfect triumph when the Son of man shall come the second time in the clouds with great glory to judgment, when His kingdom of grace shall be perfected in His eternal kingdom of glory—with a description of a sight of the final dissolution of all things as they now exist, with the crash of nature, the cessation of time, and the glorious city of the great King where He will reign with His saints for evermore.

Because of the poverty of earth's language, uninspired waters back of the celestial songs of praise clothed in the most gorgeous imagery, and uttered in the most sublime strains ever heard on earth since the world began.

Hope. [To be continued.] The Apostles' Creed.

The precise origin of this simplest and most ancient of all creeds is involved in some uncertainty.

It has long been a matter of dispute among learned theologians. It is at least certain that its universal use in the church may be traced back to the apostolic age itself, yet to that immediately succeeding; and there is a very old tradition that each of the twelve articles of the creed was composed by an apostolic author.

It is said the twelve assembled in council before dispersing themselves to preach the Gospel in their respective worlds, to frame the symbol or watchword of the Christian Church, and it will be interesting to our readers to know the words of the same meaning as is ascribed. The tradition is as follows:

St. Peter—"I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth."

St. Andrew—"And in Jesus Christ, his only Son our Lord."

St. James the Great—"Who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, Born of the Virgin Mary."

St. John—"Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried."

St. Thomas—"He descended into hell; for, 'He went into the place of departed spirits,' which are considered as words of the same meaning."

St. James the Less—"He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty."

St. Matthew—"The Holy Catholic Church, the Communion of Saints; St. Simon—"The Forgiveness of Sins."

St. Judas Thaddeus—"The Resurrection of the Body."

St. Matthias—"And the Life everlasting—Amen."

Daniel Webster once paid the following beautiful tribute to woman: "May it please your honors, there is nothing upon this earth that can compare with the faithful attachment of a wife; no creature who for the object of her love is so indomitable, so persevering, so ready to suffer and to die. Under the most depressing circumstances, woman's weakness becomes mighty power, her timidity becomes fearless courage, all her shyness and sinking passes away, and her spirit acquires the firmness of marble—admirable firmness—when circumstances drive her to put forth all her energies under the inspiration of her noble spirit."

Mary Ann B. Anon Lawrence, the distinguished Boston merchant, was an advocate of early marriage, but was strenuously opposed to any man marrying a fortune. Spending of a desirable match for a friend he said: "My only objection to her is that she has a few thousand dollars in cash. This, however, might be remedied for, after purchasing a house, she would be given to near connections, or to some public institution."

As a wag says: "It is folly to expostulate a young girl to love a man who everybody speaks well of. Get up a personation, and her affections will cling so fast that a dozen guardians can't remove them."
