There was nothing left for the indolent and disobliging clerk to do but, settle his accounts and leave. The lesson was severe, and one which will be lasting in his own case and also in that of his fellow clerks who saw the transaction.

Questions.—Young man, didn't you think just as much of your loving mother when she was preparing your breakfast in the kitchen, as when she was dusting the parlor? Young woman, was your kind mother any less your mother when she was washing your clothes or your face than when she was receiving company in the parlor?

Are you any less a gentleman or lady when doing acts of household duties than when amusing yourselves in company? If you say "nay," then let me ask you, are you despising and depressing those who are enganged in more useful employments than others?

Do you see the point?
