Housekeepers' Recipes. We take the following from Mrs. Hunnitee's diary in the Hearth and Home:

The Hair. - The hair, like the bails and cuticle, is the product of the vital vegetative system, and grows even after death. Its coloring matter is supposed to be sulphur and carbon-the former giving auburn, golden, and chestnut tints, and the latter the darker shades. Any concentration on the great vital centres, as intense study, great grief, or excessive fright, withdraws the vegeto-vital force from the surfaces and produces gray hair. It is also caused by too great warmth and protection of the head. The French and Italian women, who spend much time in the open air with no coveringion their heads, have heavy veringion their heads, have heavy genuine Lovering and other Syrups. suits of moist, beautiful hair. I would New Orleans and other Baking Morecommend to this lady to wash her lasses. head every week in salt water, which will stop its falling out, and rub the skin of the head with a dry, coarse towel. Then apply a dressing composed of equal parts of bay-rum and sweet oil, in which a few drops of tineture of cantharides have been mingled. This will stimulate the skin, and restore her hair to its original color .-Frequent brushing of the scalp will help. - Tooth Powder .- Two ounces of prepared chalk, half an onnce pulverized borax, the same of orris-root pulverized, and quarter of an ounce of cassia powder.

Candles .- Allow one pound of alum for every five pounds of tallow, dissolve it in water, and then put in the tallow and stir it till they are both melted together.

Chapped Hands.-In half a pint of boiling water dissolve a pound of white soap cut, in shavings, and add eix ounces of olive oil and one drachm of pulverized camphor, then pour is into moulds. How Shall we Keep our Fowls? This is a question which concerns thousands at this season. A supply of fresh eggs is a great addition to our ble one to our table. Fresh egs for breakfast all the year round is decidedly Utopian. In the first place, we must provide light and air. Windows are absolutely necessary on the south side of the honnery, so that the win ter's sun can be made available for warmth. All the scraps and soapgrease of the kitchen can be returned to us in the shape of fresh eggs, and will greatly lessen the expense of feeding the hens. They must have animal food. When the ground is open, and worms abundant, they are as well supplied as though they dined on roastbeef and mutton, but in winter it must be given to them. All the bones left from the table, the bits of feet the left from the table, the bits of fat, the scrapings of the plates, etc., should be treasured for their use. Keep an old kettle on the back of the stove, turn kettle on the back of the stove, turn all slops into it, even coffee grounds, and when well-heated, feed it. At noon-time, it can be given smoking hot, and quite watery—the warm drink helps to supply the carbon they need. Where beef's liver, can be cheaply obtained, it makes excellent food; chop it fine, and they will eat it greedily. Keep a box filled with gravel, ashes, old plaster, slacked lime er oystershells—even hard-coal ashes will not come amiss—for hens must have food come amiss-for hens must have food needful to form egg-shells, else they will drop them shell-less. For grain, we think a mixture is the most profitable. Sweepings from the grist-mill do very well—oats, corn and ryo ground together coarsely, make good food. Hens desire variety—will not lay eggs on one kind of nutriment. Where oil-cake and scrap-cakes can be purchased, they are the most desi-rable food. Bone manure is excellent to go with the scraps. To this diet add coarse corn-hominy, and you will never complain that hens are not worth heir feed. 1809 7.100 9.15 12. Cleanliness is all-important—the hen house should be whitewashed with hot lime, spring and fall, and the poles on which they roost should be covered with kerosene-oil every month or two. These precautions are needful to destroy the insects which will breed in such places. Pure warm water in iron basins, with a bit of brimstone in the basin, should be given every morning, but not allowed to freeze. If the chickens are sick, give them soappills made of yellow bar-soap; this acts like a cathartic. If chilled, give popper-two of them if the chickens are large—or hot milk and popper can be turned down the neck with a teaspoon.

A hen increases in the amount of eggs she lays until four years old; then she is only fit for chicken-broth We would not enter into a discussion upon the merits of different breeds nor would we pay twelve dollars a pair for "novelties." The white Leg-borns are our favorites; their eggs are large, their chickens grow rapidly, and their flesh is tender and of delicious grown and delicious the standard of the We would not enter into a discus-

The Brahma Pootras are good sized fowls, and produce fine coffee colored ogys; but we confess to a greater de-light in the purely white eggs, and think that what the chicken gains in size, it loses in delicacy of flavor. They have mixed with our Leghorns, and formed a mongral bread which seems nave mixed with our Leghorns, and formed a mongrel breed which seems to promise well. We have forty-five chickens ready for dripping pan or pie, which have sprung from the different breeds, and are of good size. It is more profitable to keep a dozen hens than one pig—the outlay is much less, the income much greater, and the the income pig—the outlay is much less, the income much greater, and the pleasure you take in the former is inexhaustible. What pride we take in sending a dozen fresh eggs to our kind neighbors in the depth of winter!—What a relish they give to every meal! Try it, friend, and see how cheaply pleasure can be purchased.—Hearth and Home.
