M. Marion McNeil, Esq., assumed the duties of his office as Prothonotary, on the 1st inst. — R. Simpson, Esq., retiring. Mr. S. is by the prompt, careful and obliging manner, in which he discharged the duties of the office, has won a host of friends. We wish him success in the future.

Lock Haven has a lot of young girls who go regularly to the depot on the arrival of each train, to swing handkerchiefs and exchange places with the "gay young gamblers" of railroad fame. We shall not be surprised to hear of several elopements in that section if such country does not cease.

The Hollidaysburg Standard says: "Bordenberg, one of the Huntingdon county murderers, served a twelve months imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the larceny of a lot of carpenter tools from Carl & Meyers of this place." This being the case, both Bohner and Bordenberg have been in the Penitentiary.

HUNTINGDON.

(Special correspondence of The Press.)

HUNTINGDON, Nov. 27, 1899.

This town, the seat of Huntingdon county, is one of the most romantically situated, and in summer one of the prettiest towns in the State. It is built in a valley, between two high ridges of hills which mark the near approach of the Allegheny Mountains.

When I visited the town the tops of the surrounding hills were capped with snow. The foliage of the trees upon their sides was of a deep russet brown, and viewed in the early morning when the sun was just becoming visible over their summits, they presented a scene not unworthy of being transferred to canvas.

On every side the town seemed to be surrounded with these hills, some of them cleared and others covered with a stunted growth of pines. From the top of one of the highest of the hills I had a beautiful view of the town. The houses are nearly all confined to the left bank of the river. On the right side a hill, almost worthy of the name of mountain, raised its jagged capped head looking like some huge giant doing sentry duty over the as yet half-awakened town.

Curled lazily along the base of the valley was the Juniata, flowing along so sleepily that it seemed to have partaken of the condition of the town.

Huntingdon is growing quite rapidly, and I noticed many new buildings, some of which have done credit to more pretentious places. Four novapapers are published here, and the town contains several public schools.

A railroad, owned mostly, I believe, by home capital, runs between this town and Broad Top. Large quantities of ore and grain are brought to Huntingdon from the surrounding country, and shipped over that great developer of our State wealth, the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Huntingdon lost a great opportunity for rapid growth when, through the non-enterprise of some of her wealthy citizens, she allowed Altoona to become the workshop of that gigantic corporation, the Pennsylvania Central. She still possesses the material for a manufacturing city, however, the Juniata and the creeks which flow into it affording numerous water-powers.

A few miles from the town are the Warm Springs, which, with proper care and interesting might be made an fashionable summer resort, as Greenon or Ephrata. The water of these springs is, I am told, fully equal to either of the above, and were they surrounded with hotels and boarding-houses, might become famous as a watering place. The romantic and healthy country around them, were they known to the public, would attract hundreds of health and pleasure seekers.

I fear the good people of Huntingdon are not as enterprising as they might be. The town is built of brick, and contains many handsome residences. The court-house is built of brick, and is a very large affair, seemingly with a great deal of room to spare. The jail is a two story structure of stone, but does not appear to be very strong.

When I visited it recently it contained, besides the two murders of the Peightal family, four other murderers. These men (two of them are mere boys, however) are miners, and the crime has grown out of some of the "Union" difficulties which are so prolific among those who dig the "black diamonds" which underlie the soil of Pennsylvania.

Huntingdon might with propriety be called a "borough of churches."—Very denomination has its edifice, and religion is practiced in its peculiar way. The different churches numbers some eight or nine, and the numerous are neither large nor imposing.

Huntingdon abounds in hotels.—These establishments do not present accommodations, at least to a transient guest, in the matter of soap and towels or even water for washing purposes, although the Juniata is close at hand. But the meals they furnish more than make up for these defects. Everything is neat and clean and comfortable. The cloth is as white as the summit of the hills which encircle the little town, and those who gather around it as only a set of things could be found anywhere. None of the conventionalities which mark the table d'hôte, which always mar the pleasure of a good meal to a plain man, are observable here. All are at ease and enjoy themselves thoroughly. The repeat itself is one fit for a king.

Good coffee and cream which has not suffered from the madness of the dairy to the river; delicious beefsteak, such as we rarely get in Philadelphia; fresh fish from the Juniata, sweet homemade bread and hot baked wheat cakes; in all these things "mine host" of Huntingdon excels, and then the landlord is polite and affable, and does everything in his power to make you comfortable.

The people of Huntingdon are kind and obliging, and do not stare at a stranger in the usual country style.—They are just now, and have been for some time, unusually excited over a terrible murder, but with all this they treat a visitor to their pretty little town with courtesy and hospitality.—May they always continue thus the earnest wish of Audubon.

The Elk Advocate tells the following: "A young man of one of our neighboring towns a few days since started deer hunting. He started in the morning, taking some lunch, and also a quart of whiskey to keep cool and stimulate him on his way.—After traveling in the woods for some time, he imagined himself moving at a rapid rate, perhaps thirty miles from where he started. Wanting some nourishment, he looked for his lunch, but found that it was gone. As night was coming on, he thought he had better camp, concluding that he could not take the safe track of the thirty miles he had traveled during the day, so he tarried for the night, and found himself next morning on the side of a half a mile from where he started the day before.

Farmers calling a Grain-drill, will do well to call on Wharton & Maguire and examine the Willoughby gum-spring grain drill, either with or without phosphate attachment, before purchasing.

The N. Y. Independent.

We can not but add our testimony to many testimonials, from the press and public generally, in regard to the above paper. On opening its mammoth pages you see the names of noted writers who contribute weekly to its columns, articles upon different subjects, written in a masterly manner. It is, in fact, the eagerly sought repository for the Solons of our day, and by their views are scattered over the land. We may also add that it has an equal number of lady writers thus acknowledging the merits of both sexes alike.

The Independent has entered upon its twenty first year, and we hail the day of its majority, hoping that it may long live and retain its present vigor. Address Henry C. Bowen, publisher, send $2.50, and you will get a journal for one year that you will wish you had taken before.

The Phrenological Journal. The last number of this valuable production announces that in January the publisher will re-arrange the paper, instead of the quarto form. While we are accustomed to the broad page of the Journal, we can hail with equal delight the appearance of the smaller page, for we know we shall see the same number of well-written and useful articles upon the many topics that should interest everybody. It discusses on Ethnology, Mental Phrenology, Physiology, Biography, Sociology, Science and Art, and is interspersed with much miscellaneous matter, that is well selected. It is published monthly, at $3 a year, by S. R. Wells, 339 Broadway, New York.

The Holidays. The season for presents, greetings and good resolutions is approaching rapidly; and we hope our readers will not forget in the pleasure and excitement thereof, that Henry & Co. are receiving the very articles that will be suitable for Holiday presents, and that will make your friends and neighbors clever for the holiday season. You can make up your minds that you can get anything you want at their store, and that the gentlemanly proprietor will give them a call and see their immense stock of goods of all descriptions.

Measles Candy. Measles Summers & Reilly, of this place, are now manufacturing a Measles Candy, which is highly recommended for Croup, Cough, or Palmoary Affection. We have tried the Candy, and find it not only pleasant to the taste, but very efficacious as a cure. The root from which it is made is perfectly harmless, and the Candy is the article long needed by those who are afflicted with the above named complaint, and by all druggists and dealers in confectionery.

At the adjourned Court, which was held on Saturday last, Cornelius Kane, John Lynch, John M. Miller and Edward Powers, tried and convicted at the November court of murder in the second degree, were sentenced by Judge Taylor, each to seven years and eleven months in the State Prison, and confinement in the Western Penitentiary. They were taken to Pittsburg on Monday evening last.

Rev. B. B. Hamlin, D. D., Presiding Elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church, delivered a lecture for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association, in the Court House on Thursday evening next. Subject: "Hallelujah! Christ! He is a splendid orator and his lecture will be a good one, or we will be mistaken. Admission 35 and 50 cents.

The Young Men's Christian Association conduct the religious services in the County Prison at Harrisburg. The Young Men's Christian Association of this county, deliver commendable undertakings in contemplation. To the Association at large the country is indebted for much of the impetus and efficiency that is now being given to every Christian enterprise.

The following officers have been elected by the R. W. Grand Lodge of F. & A. M. of Pennsylvania: R. W. Grand Master, Robert A. Leabertson of Harrisburg; R. W. Deputy Grand Master, Samuel C. Perkins; R. W. Senior Warden, Alfred B. Pater; R. W. Junior Grand Warden, Robert Clark; R. W. Grand Treasurer, Peter Williamson; R. W. Grand Secretary, John Thurston.

Persons in need of School Books for their children, Primers, A B C cards, &c., or miscellaneous and similar notions of all kinds, should call at Lewis' Book Store, where they will find a good assortment. Any book of recent publication ordered when desired.

Ladies Dresses and Boys' Clothing. Mrs. B. Annie McObay respectfully informs the public that she has removed to the house formerly occupied by H. McManigill, on Washington street, and is prepared to make Ladies' Dresses and Boys' Clothing of all kinds. She respectfully invites a full share of patronage.

A fracas occurred at the Exchange hotel, in this place, on Saturday night last, in which a colored man named John Flowdown, was struck in the face with a bar by a man named Heales, and had several teeth knocked out.

Prof. Addison P. Wyman, the popular composer, has charge of the department of Music in the Hollidaysburg Seminary.

Married. At Huntingdon, Nov. 26th, by Rev. Geo. W. Zahriser, Mr. George W. Hayes of Clearfield, Pa., to Miss Anna M. Boonman, of Huntingdon, Pa.

Died. On the 6th inst., in this borough, Carrie, daughter of F. and R. B. Wright, aged 6 years and 2 months. Funeral services at 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon.

In Henderson township, Nov. 28th, 1899, after a few days illness, HARRY B. son of Simon White, aged 11 years, 10 months and 20 days.
