Steam for Plows.

Mr. Owen Redmond of Rochester, N. Y., has invented and constructed a steam locomotive which weighs, including boiler and water, but two tuns, yet which draws three plows and does excellent work. So say the Rochester journals, on the strength of an experimental trial. Says The Union:

"There are wheels forward, which are made to turn under the control of the steering-wheel, and thus the machine is guided by the pilot upon the deck. All this is simple enough, and every mechanic knows what it is or what may be done in this way. The main or traction-wheels are what constitute the feature of the machine. They are five feet in diameter, and have a tread of eight inches in width. The rims of these wheels are perforated in twelve places, equi-distant, the apertures being somewhat of triangular shape. Through these apertures twelve blades or spears, resembling somewhat the flukes of an anchor, are projected by machinery within the rim of the wheel. As the surface of the wheel in revolving comes to the earth, these blades protrude through the aperture and are forced into the ground to prevent the wheel from slipping, and, as soon as they cease to be of service in the progress of the wheel, they retreat within the rim, and from the uppermost side of the rim are not seen at all. These blades are seven inches long and five in width, and may be projected to a greater or less extent at the will of the operator. They are operated by two cams and two levers, quite simple, and there is no back strain as the rim of the wheel leaves the ground. There are powerful springs which come into use to relieve the blades when they are projected against stones or other obstructions. There was no slip to the wheels at the trial yesterday, and the utility of the invention was fully established on this point."

We trust this is all true, and that the new locomotive will do lots of plowing and other useful work. It seems to begin well.

Housekeepers' Recipes.

We take the following from Mrs. Hunnibee's diary in the Hearth and Home:

For a Cold.—Take a teaspoonful of crab apple jelly every hour or two.—The relief it affords is almost immediate, and has proved permanent.

Rye Breakfast Cakes.—Two cups of rye meal, one cup of flour, two well-beaten cakes, whites and yolks separately, one pint of sweet milk, and a little salt. Bake in earthen cups about thirty minutes in a hot oven. If they are not thoroughly done when removed from the cups, they will fall.

Sausage Meat.—Three pounds of fresh pork, one of lean beef, four teaspoonfuls of black pepper, six of salt, six of powdered sage and summer savory. When it was thoroughly mixed, I pressed it into small bags made of old domestic. It will when used be cut off in slices, floured and fried. The hearts of hogs make excellent sausages, and are used in the following manner: Twenty pounds of hogs' hearts, ten pounds of fat pork, twelve ounces of salt, six ounces of pepper, sage to taste, other spices if you like them, chop fine and put in skins.

Scrapple.—Take all the odd bits of lean; the faces of the porkers, a small portion of liver, and boil all together till the bones drop out. Pick out the bones and everything non-edible, chop the meat fine, draining all the liquor back into the kettle, and removing all the fat. Thicken the liquor with Indian-meal till it is of the consistency of batter, and boil quite a while; then put in the chopped meat, sage, salt and pepper; boil altogether and take out into pans. When cold, cut in slices and fry for breakfast.

☞At a Presbyterian installation in Kansas the other day, the minister, who was from Missouri, and who gave the right hand of fellowship to him who was installed, took occasion to say that he was "from the home of the bushwacker," and that his friend "lived in the State of Jayhawkers. We bushwacked you and you Jayhawked us." Therefore, "I give you the right hand of Christian fellowship. Redeemed Missouri greets victorious Kansas."
