Our Duty and Destiny as a Nation.

BY H. C. N. SECOND PAPER. INTERTEMPERANCE. Then there is intemperance, an evil of such magnitude as to threaten the very existence of our civil institutions, and if something can not be done to arrest its progress, our progress as a nation must and will be arrested.

Our Duty and Destiny as a Nation.

and he must soon leave the full and good cause in stronger hands, under the direction of a wise and honorable Providence. And on leaving of the field, he would not weary you with the appalling statistics which truth would justify, as you know for yourselves, the authority that in a single year (1868) more money was spent in the United States for strong drink than would pay for our National debt.

Should Women Vote?

The majority of the female portion of the inhabitants of these United States do not desire the right of suffrage. Woman is physically incompetent to perform the duties of a voter. It would destroy all that pleasing modesty, delicacy and refinement which in woman is so great a recommendation.

The Wrong Man Politiced.

The following story, which we do not remember to have seen in print, may be old, but it is received as true: At a famous and fashionable watering-place, a gentleman was sitting in a room with a woman.
