WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.
BY HORACE GREELY.

XXIII. ABOUT TREE PLANTING.

I have had so little experience in Tree-Planting that I should have preferred to say no more about it; but letters that have reached me imply that the ignorance of others is even denser than mine. For the sake of those only who are not unwilling to learn, I venture a few timid suggestions with regard to Tree Planting.

I. Ten or twelve years ago, I bought a pound or more of Locust seed rather late in the Spring, sealed it by plunging at night in the little cotton bag which held it into a pot of boiling water, and letting the seed steep and steam in the bag till next morning, when the seed was planted in rows in a newly broken bit of poor old pasture-land. This was a mistake: I should have given that seed the richest available spot in my garden, to say nothing of planting it as early as April 20th. My Locusts came up slowly and grew feebly that year, not to speak of all. Still, many came up and survived, and my place is this day the richer for them. It might have been still richer had I seasonably known more.

II. What I would now advise as to Locust and most other trees is that the best seed be procured in the Fall, or soon as it drops from the trees; that part of it be sown in drills, two feet apart, with two inches between seeds in the drills, and that the richest of dry, warm garden soil be devoted to this purpose. Fill a large box with rich loam, stir four ounces of seed in to this, and set the box in a cool cellar, where frost does not enter, and here let it remain till April; then take out the seed and earth together, and sow in drills as above. If some one who cuts Locusts during the Winter or Spring will allow you to trace the smaller surface roots from the new made stumps and out or dig them up, cut fifty or a hundred pieces of root the size of your finger each two feet long, and plant these, about May 1, in the places where you want Locusts to come forward most rapidly. Some of them may not grow, but I think many will; and from all these sources, I judge that you will obtain a good supply of young trees. Let those you start from the seeds get two years' growth before you take them up and set them where you want trees, whether in your present woods, in ragged, rocky pastures, on the sides of steep ravines, or around your buildings. You cannot fail to obtain some trees if you follow these directions.

III. Begin early this fall to gather Chestnuts, Hickory Nuts, Walnuts, White Oak Acorns, &c., to plant. Select the largest and finest nuts, giving the preference to those which ripen and fall earliest. Keep them in cool, damp earth in some barn or cellar where rats and mice cannot reach them, and persist in collecting till December. Then plant a part in your garden or in any rich ground where they are not likely to be disturbed, letting the residue remain in the boxes of moist earth where you first planted them till early Spring, then plant these, like the former, in rows two feet apart, with six inches between seed and seed in each row, and give the rows careful culture for two years; after which, set them where you wish them to grow.

I venture to suggest that he who has a rugged, stony hill or other lot which he wishes to surrender to forest should plow it, if it can be plowed, next September or October; if too rocky to be even imperfectly plowed, dig up the earth with pick and spade, and sow it thickly with hickory nuts, walnuts, chestnuts, locust, and other tree seeds, expecting that some will be dug up and carried off by squirrels, &c., and that others will fall to germinate. Go over it with hoes the ensuing June or July, killing all weeds and other infestations; and, nearly a year later, repeat the operation, taking up young trees from your garden or nursery, and filling them in wherever there is room. Plant thickly in order to force an upward rather than a seraglio growth; and so that you may begin to cut out the superfluous saplings for bean-poles, hop-poles, &c., three or four years thereafter. Cut late in Winter or early in Spring, so that the stumps will each throw up two or more shoots or sprouts, which usually grow much faster than the original tree did.

The process of thinning may thus be continued indefinitely, while the choicer trees are allowed to attain their stately proportions. And thus a rocky, sterile hill-side or knoll may be made to yield a crop annually after the first two or three years from planting, while growing trees of decided value. I judge that almost any land within fifty miles of a great city and not more than two miles from a railroad depot or from navigable water may thus be made to earn a good interest on $100 per acre, after meeting all the cost of breaking up and planting. I confidently assert that many thousands of sterile, rocky acres, which now yield less than $10 per acre in pasturage, would net at least double that sum to the owner if wisely devoted to forest trees.

I have a hearty love of forests—They afford gentle companionship to the thoughtful and rest the overworked, fevered brain. Our streams will be fuller and less capricious, our gales less destructive, our climate less capricious, when we shall have reforested our rugged slopes and rocky crests with trees. Timber grows yearly scarcer and dearer, when it ought to become more plentiful and accessible, and would be if we devoted to trees all the land which we cultivate at a loss or fail to cultivate at all. Let our boys be incited to gather seeds and plant nurseries; let young trees be bought by the thousand, where they now are by the dozen, and let us all co-operate in covering our unsightly rocks and making glad our waste places by a superabundance of choice, thrifty, healthy trees.

HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINE.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily dictate the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach them that there are hundreds who ride the tide, and contain in the course which almost invariably brings them eventually to the grave. Letter to the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the words of nature, it must be apparent to all that whenever later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of every rich and indigestible food or intoxicating drink, inevitably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes clogged and refuses to act; the liver fails to perform its functions, dropsical and its extension effects upon the rest of the system; the blood is impure, and the individual perishes in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of pure, dry, and complete abstinence from all such. They bring their own ruin upon themselves, and all that is necessary to restore them to health is with every thing that is rich and stimulating to be abandoned, and to have permitted interested persons to administer to them the medicine which is recommended to cure consumption, and to be governed by the directions of the physician who prescribes it. The system is diseased depend upon it, in its case out of the hands of the doctor, and the patient is left to his own devices. SCHENCK'S MARSHMALLOW PILLS.—The daily increased consumption of these pills is a striking proof of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently. Instead of any more food being taken, call on Dr. SCHENCK for more information that full and complete directions for the use of each package of the PILLS. PLEASANT PURGATIVE AND SWEET WOOD TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

One of the first steps the physician should take with consumptive patients is to correct the diet. There is no more to be done? Certainly not by giving such diet as cannot be assimilated, and which does not instead of increasing the functions of the digestive organs, merely increases the amount of food which is taken, and which is not assimilated, but which results in putrefaction and finally in death.
